Freeze Wipes Out City's Butter Stocks

THREE DAIRIES SOLD OUT BY SUNDAY RUSH

Run Starts as OPA Officials Announce Freeze Order Effective at Midnight.

SALES RESUME MONDAY

Dairy Officials Say Greater Supplies Will Be on Hand For Rationing.

There was virtually no butter to sell—even if it could be sold—in Mansfield stores today following a Sunday run on dairy stores and groceries started when consumers learned of the "freeze" effective last midnight on butter, shortening and salad oils

Three of the city's four leading dairies reported sell-outs even to large stocks of margarine, while the fourth was spared only by the fact that its Sunday open hours were short and that it had wholesale stocks on hand to meet the increased retail demands.

Dairymen, however, expressed the opinion that they will have good stocks on hand both for their own retail sales and for supplying retail stores by Monday when sales will be resumed under ration.

The Office of Price Administration order which some retailers had expected Saturday but which was not announced until Sunday afternoon, halted sales of butter, lard, margarine, shortening and cooking salad oils at midnight last night.

These items will be included along with meat and cheese in the ration program effective Monday.

Restaurants and institutions are not believed to be affected by the order, although local stores had received no information on the subject yet this noon. Neither had the Richland county war price and rationing board.

Ration officials here said they expected such information would be forthcoming soon and that they expected announcement of point values on the new items added to the ration list later in the week, probably by Wednesday

OPA officials said the sudden

City Crime Wave Keeps Police Busy

Boys Flee Jewelry Store Robbery Scene; Safe Robbery Fail.

Two colored boys early today were foiled in their effort to burglarize display windows of a North Main street jewelry store. safe robbers escaped without loot at a bottling firm; burglars were foiled in a meat market looting attempt and jewelry was obtained by house prowlers in a week-end crime wave, according to police reports today.

According to Plainclothesman Howard Schuck and Patrolman Richardt Hecht, the boy robbers fled from the Rogers jewelry store when alarmed by a passerby who notified police of their bold burglar attempt at 7:40 a. m. They used a brick to break a hole through the glass beneath burglar arm wires and in their flight abandoned a hooked wire apparently designed to pull watches and other jewelry through the hole.

Schuck was walking to work when he noticed the running boys and Hecht arrived in a cruiser in time to see them disappearing in an alley. A search for the pair, described as being about 10 to 15 years old, continued today.

When safe crackers attacked a vault at the Pepsi Cola company, 82 East Dickson avenue, they discovered it was unlocked but found nothing of value after breaking the lock from an inner compartment. Records and sales tax stamps were strewn on the floor when the office was opened at 5:25 a. m. by Joe Menrath, an employe. M. J. Berer, proprietor told Lieutenant Eugene Hartnett and Patrolmen Floyd Bowers and Glen Adams that no cash had been taken

An inner steel lining of a rear door of the Park meat market on East Park street frustrated burglars early today after they had broken away an outer wooden paneling, according to Patrolmen George Yoakam and Russell Miles

Police were told yesterday that a bogus applicant for room privileges burglarized the E. F. Balliett home, 279 West Third street, and the home of Miss Eunice Palmer, 138 North Weldon avenue, obtaining cash and valuable jewelry.

The householders reported that

U. S.-BRTISH PARLEY ABOUT RUSSIA HINTED

Eden Brings Expert on Soviet Affairs To Conference With Secretary Hull.

COMMENTS ON CHURCHILL

Republican Support Develops For Immediate Action on Post-War Moves.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden resumed his conferences with Secretary of State Cordell Hull today and there were indications that problems involving the Soviet union were being discussed

Eden was accompanied by British Ambassador Lord Halifax and William Strange, British assistant undersecretary of state who is regarded as an outstanding expert on Russian affairs. Today's visit to the state department was Stange's first direct contact with Hull.

Eden told reporters before entering Hull's office that he thought yesterday's speech by Prime Minister Winston Churchill was "pretty much the same as what I've been telling you."

Eden has made clear his belief that a long, tough war lies ahead. He also has let it be known that while he favors present and continuous exploratory talks on postwar issues, he believes detailed discussions of war settlements should be left until later.

Meanwhile, new Republican support developed for immediate action to deal with post-war problems coincident with Churchill's call for a powerful new "world organization" and a strikingly detailed analysis of Soviet union war aims.

The analysis of Soviet war aims appeared in New Masses, a Communist weekly, notable for its reflection of Moscow policy. The New Masses article defined large Soviet union claims to territory in Europe

A Republican boost for the Ball-Hill-Hatch Burton senate resolution for immediate creation of an Allied council to deal with post-war problems came in the form of round robin endorsement by 26 new Republican congressmen.

Wendell L. Willkie said their action proved that the Republican rank and file recognized the

Allied Columns Batter Nazis Back In Tunisia

U. S. Armored Columns And British 8th Army Imperil Rommel; Nazi Sources Hint At Retreat; 1,000 Italians Taken Prisoner By Yanks.

(By United Press)

The British radio, quoting late reports from Tunisia, said today American forces were "in sight of Maknassy."

(By Associated Press)

A great Allied offensive, the beginning of the battle to smash Marshal Erwin Rommel and drive the Axis from Tunisia and all North Africa, had burst in all its fury today with the British Eighth army and American armored columns driving forward in unison under the greatest Allied canopy of air power yet assembled in the Mediterranean theater.

The possibility that Rommel was withdrawing his German divisions was suggested by a German high command communique which said strong British and American forces had attacked "Italian positions" in South and Central Tunisia. Heretofore Rommel has always left Italians as his rearguard when beginning a retreat.

Signalizing the start of the long-prepared offensive, Allied headquarters announced Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery's forces were making satisfactory progress in their efforts to penetrate the tough defenses of the Mareth desert line in the south and American troops in the central Tunisian sector had scored several successes.

Dispatches from the front said American infantry, under an advancing curtain of artillery fire, had crossed "some of the greatest natural military defenses in the world" in a dawn-to-dusk thrust yesterday from El Guetar. This plunge through the hills placed forward elements less than 70 miles from the port of Gabes.

Capturing from 1,000 to 1,400 Italians, the Americans under command of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., were reported dashing on toward Gabes, where they would throttle Marshal Rommel by blocking his supply lines.

Other dispatches said the American armored and motorized infantry teams were progressing in a three-pronged drive from Gafsa, with one of the other columns approaching Maknassy, northeast of El Guetar and only 52 miles from Mahares, on the coast north of Gabes.

The Algiers radio said American troops had taken the village of Bou Hamad, apparently the same as Bou Hamran, eight miles east of El Guetar.

The Italian high command said Allied forces on both the southern and central fronts started a "violent offensive" yesterday after intense artillery preparation and that at least seven persons were injured in a raid on Naples by heavy bombers Saturday night.

The finger-like American columns apparently were nearing the point where they would control all the important passes in the area immediately north of the Chott Djerid salt lake,

ARMY LIMIT EFFORT FAILS

Leading Senate Critics Drop Plans For Legislation; Appropriation Stands.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—The congressional movement to limit the size of the armed forces apparently collapsed today as three leading senate critics abandoned effort to obtain legislation.

The senate appropriations subcommittee, which has investigated proposals to limit the size of the army, may write a critical report this week but appeared unlikely to make adverse recommendations.

Sen. Elmer Thomas (D) Okla., a member of the subcommittee, who has urged that the army draft be halted, said that there is no prospect of a strenuous effort being made to reduce the projected 11,000,000 armed forces by legislation.

Two other critics of the plan of the chiefs of staffs, while de-

NAZIS BATTLE IN PARIS MOVIE

Official Tells of Revolver Fight That Cost Lives of 27 German Soldiers.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—A revolver fight between two groups of German soldiers in a Paris movie house in which 27 Nazis were killed and 70 wounded was reported today by Bernard S. Townroe secretary of the United Associations of Great Britain and France.

Addressing a meeting at Epsom college, he said the fight occurred about two months ago between German troops stationed at Paris and troops reportedly on leave from the Russian front.

He did not give his source but said they were attending a movie at the "Kino Soldaten," formerly the Rex theater. Men of the Paris garrison, Townroe said, applauded news pictures, but the troops who had experienced setbacks on the Russian front "cried out the pictures were not true."

"Mutual insults led to many of the Germans pulling their revolvers out of their holsters and firing at each other," Townroe declared.

It was the second report of disturbances at the Rex since the theater was taken over exclusively for German use. Last Dec. 13 the Moscow radio said more than 100 German officers and men were killed when a time bomb exploded during a performance.

CHURCHILL: Premier Gives War Two More Years To Run

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—Prime Minister Churchill sketched for the world in a radio broadcast last night his vision of a post-war order where peace eventually might be kept by a European and Asiatic council of free nations, but warned the British people of the necessity of "keeping their eye on the ball" to win a struggle which might go on two years or more before Adolf Hitler is crushed into "death, dust and ashes"

The speech, which was devoted chiefly to the problems of creating a peaceful world of tomorrow and a comprehensive "four-year plan" for improved social conditions in Britain, drew quick but mixed reactions from the British press, some sections of which felt the prime minister had not gone far enough in his post-war thinking, while others stressed the necessity of winning the war as the primary consideration at present.

Churchill placed his government squarely on record as favoring a post-war system of comprehensive social insurance "for all purposes from the cradle to the grave," including health and unemployment benefits.

He promised a social system free of snobbery, with equal opportunities for all classes of citizens, and added:

"We cannot have a band of drones in our midst, whether they come from ancient aristocracy, or modern plutocracy or the ordinary type of pub-crawler."

The post-war organization for

NEW THREAT

Northwest Feed Shortage Adds Peril to Meat Supply.

PORTLAND, Ore.—(AP)—A feed shortage and a late spring in the Pacific northwest threaten to curtail further the United States' already meager meat supply.

Stockmen cannot send cattle and sheep out to graze for grass is not growing, except on sheltered ranges. Hay supplies, used to feed the stock through the winter, are almost exhausted.

Agriculture experts report sheepmen are suffering heavy losses from early lambing, that a few cattlemen are hard hit, but the situation is not hopeless.

The experts said the next three weeks will determine the outcome. If the cold weather continues, losses will mount. In the meanwhile stockmen are searching the country for hay.

Road Improvements Costing $274,850 Needed In County

Repairs and resurfacing of Richland county roads will cost $274,850. County Engineer Howard Sword estimated today following completion of an inspection of damages caused by winter freezing and thawing.

Largest item in the detailed estimates prepared by the engineer, is the retreading of a 27.65 miles in the northern part of the county where the roads have disintegrated to such an extent that unless minimum retread is applied this year, the former investment in the surfacing will be in jeopardy, Sword said. Application of a retread two inches thick will entail cost of $120,000, the engineer estimated.

Included in this category are sections of the County line road, No. 11, the Shiloh-Norwalk road, No. 39, Plymouth-Springmill, No. 191, Beam, No. 51, Millsboro east and west No. 48 and Bowman street, No. 215.

Application of approximately 60,000 cubic yards of gravel to 149 miles of gravel-surfaced roads in the county is expected to cost about $90,000, second largest item in the estimate.

Inspection of traffic-bound stone or slag roads revealed the need of resurfacing and repairs to the extent of about $10,500, Sword reported. Patching bituminous roads would cost another $15,000, he estimated, since repairs to the total 151.56 miles involved would require about 2,500 cubic yards cutback work

Berming and ditching of approximately 85 miles by the county highway staff will cost $21,250, it was estimated in the report, with incidental repairs to bridges and culverts expected to total $5,000 and weed mowing throughout the summer months about $8,000.

HITLER: Long Silence At End, But There's No Bragging

(By Associated Press)

LONDON Adolf Hitler emerged yesterday from a 133-day silence which had given rise to rumors of his illness or death to tell the German people in a radio broadcast the crisis on the Russian front had been surmounted, assure them their losses in war dead were relatively small, and admit parts of Germany had become "war zones" as a result of incessant Allied bombing.

In one of the shortest and most subdued speeches he ever delivered the fuehrer told the German war dead memorial day gathering at the Zaughaus (military museum) in Berlin, the fourth such assemblage since the war began, that 542,000 German soldiers had been killed since the start of the conflict.

(Premier Josef Stalin has set the total of German dead on the eastern front at 4,000,000, and Germany's own admissions of losses in their entrapment and defeat at Stalingrad would appear to make Hitler's total figure for two years of war unduly low.)

Hitler told his people the army, despite its losses, was being strengthened rapidly by additional classes of service and

Whether or not you are a member of a local church. What denomination you prefer. To which local church you would choose to belong. Names and addresses of those questioned will be taken, and the number of persons living in the home will also be recorded.

Two pamphlets will be left at each home. These are: "My Daily Bible Reading," and "Where To Look In the Bible."

Learn Galion Man Wounded In Action In North Africa

GALION — That their son is only slightly wounded instead of "missing in action" brought joy to a Galion family during the past week.

Wrinkles Caused by Ill Health

By MME. QUI VIVE

It is with a sinking feeling in the heart that the fortyish woman observes that her close companion, the woman in the looking glass, is taking on facial creases. She believes that, when she is older, these tissue blemishes won't matter so much. It is her opinion that time has given her a cruel blow. It may be that the hand of fate has written them, but it is also possible that they were self-inflicted. No matter. Either way, they are just as hateful. And what can be done about them?

It is true that the brave, poised woman has her emotions under control, who has made it a life business to be as happy and contented as possible under all circumstances, is not likely to develop facial creases until late in life. A cheerful temperament keeps the lip ends lifted, facial muscles strong and resilient. If the corners of the mouth droop, fibers become soft and saggy, furrows form. A good disposition and a cheerful outlook are the best insurances against a face that alters with the years. These qualities make for health as well as good appearance.

We're all going through a tough time right now, with a world that has gone mad. We must be strong. The boys who come back, won't want to find their mothers aged, prematurely.

Wrinkles can be caused by ill health, loss of sleep, lack of fat in the diet, cares that weigh heavily on the heart. Nutrition is of great importance. Over the entire body, directly under the skin, is a distribution of adipose tissue. When eating habits are wrong, when the diet does not contain all the necessary food elements, this padding of fat cells goes into a state of dissolution. The cuticle becomes loose and falls into tiny furrows. If you happen to be a career girl, snatching a haphazard luncheon, getting home so tired you can't eat your dinner, keep the foregoing fact in mind. Have a proper luncheon, eat some candy in midafternoon or have a malted milk. The human motor can't run without fuel.

Some busy women get jittery, lose interest in food. They are subject to malnutrition that brings many beauty griefs in its train—dental difficulties, loss of hair, fatigue, nervousnuess, as well as wrinkles.

Deep grooves can be erased only by plastic surgery, which is expensive. Early crinkles call for local treatment which will help if health conditions are favorable.

After washing the face at night with warm water and a bland soap, rinse with warm water, dry with gentle pats. Spread on a heavy cream, using upward sweeps of flattened fingers. Slap the flesh briskly. Use the finger tips like little hammers. In the morning splash on cold water, dry, apply an astringent.

Children Hurt By Divorces Of Parents

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

Defenseless children of 'teen age suffer most when their parents are divorced.

We parents who live companionably in a home where there is relative emotional security must know how our own children above eight or twelve years of age worry and suffer it they suppose we have violated some convention or won rebuke from their playmates or playmates' parents.

How immeasurably more would our children suffer if they saw us parents in constant quarrels or mutual discourtesies; or if they heard others talk about us.

Child Feels Insecure.

After a divorce, suppose the child spends some time with one of the parents, some with the other, and is fed the while with words of bitterness and hate by each about the other, with the relatives of both sides generously adding their bitter bit. He will feel insecure and unhappy.

Of course, we must admit that there are some parents remaining together whose strained relations or open conflicts make life even more miserable to the child than if they were separated.

In any event, I wish the parents always would try to consider the rights and feelings of the child, putting themselves in their imagination in his place. Doing so, each will have a strong motive to restrain himself or herself and adjust himself or herself more amiably to the other. Many parents who separate might have learned, for the child's sake, to get along fairly well together, if both had worked at it hard enough.

Protect Child.

I wish, moreover, that those parents facing divorce would try to protect the child from as much suffering as possible. To keep tugging at the child's heartstrings and trying to engender hatred in him for the other parent is only to prolong his torture.

This and similar problems I discuss further in my book, "Marriage and Parenthood," which you probably will find in your public library.

A selected list of books on marriage, preparation for marriage and how to make a go of it, may be had without cost by writing me at 235 East 45th street, New York City, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp.

Solving Parent Problems.

Q. My girl, 8 years old, says "ain't." This annoys me very much.

A. Learn not to be annoyed by such trivial matters. Your daughter will eventually choose to speak good English if she finds increasing satisfaction from companionship with you and the other adults of the family and always hears good English from you and them.

HAVE CELEBRATION IN HONOR OF BIRTHDAY

Friendships of 50 years or more were renewed Sunday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. Kelly, Vennum avenue, when business associates, U. C. T. members and relatives of L. L. Frederick helped him celebrate his 90th birthday.

Mr. Frederick came to Mansfield about 60 years ago and has lived to see many changes here, the most regrettable, according to Mr. Frederick was the fire that destroyed the First Congregational church of which he was a member.

Mr. Frederick is the only charter member of the Mansfield Council No. 13 of U. C. T., organized in 1890, now living in this city.

Mrs. Cairns of Brinkerhoff avenue, who celebrated her 90th birthday two years ago, was the oldest guest present at the event. Miss Judith Hartman, four-year-old great granddaughter of Mr. Frederick, was the youngest guest present.

When tea was served late in the afternoon, the table was centered with a lovely daffodil arrangement and presided over by Miss Martha Hartman and Miss Janet Kelly, granddaughters of the honored guest. Mr. Frederick received many congratulatory messages and flowers during the day.

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, March 23.

While there are signs of perplexities and problems yet there is nothing that the exercise of common sense and social amenities should not happily turn into friendly associations. The assistance and understanding of friends and superiors may prove profitable. But conserve funds and shun extravagance.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of pleasant and profitable relations, both in business and personal affiliations. A change of point of view as well as environs or procedures may make the position more tenable, with influential friends and associates ready to unravel some perplexities.

A child born on this day may have many abilities of a fine order, with an appreciation of art, culture and beauty, but may be predisposed to squander its energies and substance.

More than a million painted panels are inspected annually in nationwide tests of paint durability.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

There is much to be said, I thought, for the rigid training given royal youth, which now enabled Georges, fugitive King of Trees, to keep his face composed and lips mechanically smiling, while Mary tossed one verbal barb after another into his pride. Yet her evident intention to continue the baiting indefinitely must have made his spirit quail.

But Noel, although trained like one of the type so often mis-called "gentleman," has neither the experience nor the temperament for such rigid self-control. So I was not surprised to see him rush toward his young wife as she voiced her proposal to give us a "point by point description" of Georges' disguise and to hear his muted but peremptory protest.

"Mary! Mary!" he said in little more than a tensely whisper, but with a poignant throbbing in the word that clutched at my sympathies and lessened my resentment at his recent strictures based on petty pride, against Mary's choice of a gown for this party.

"What do you mean by this atrocious performance?" he asked, in a steadier voice.

"Stop making noises like a husband, Noel," she said carelessly, then, as he spoke her name again, flung up her head and laughed like a mischievous child.

"I do believe you're jealous, Noel," she said with apparent delight. "Oh boy! Isn't this something? Nothing like having a handsome fugitive king coming into your life, to make a husband sit up and take notice! Honestly, Darling, I've been afraid lately you were getting bored. This is red meat for my spirit."

Then she turned to Olina with a smile that would have caused the Cheshire Cat an envious pang.

Appeals to Olina.

"For the love of Isaac and the rest of the patriarchs, 'Lina," she said, "see what you can do with this husband of mine, will you? He's spoiled my yarn about Georges' Father Christmas get-up, but I want to ask Georges about 'steen million questions, and I can't be bothered with a husband glowering at me from the sidelines. Be a pal, 'Lina, and take him off my hands!"

Many times, in the day when Olina was doing everything in her power to hurt Mary and alienate Noel from her, I could have prayed that the exiled Princess of Transvania might be thus humiliated. But for months now she had been Mary's loyal friend, and I longed to tell her—what neither she nor Noel nor yet Georges suspected — that Mary was merely giving a superb theatrical performance, aiming to kill the attraction toward her which Georges had so strongly evinced.

Mary was succeeded almost too well, I thought, as I saw a gleam of distaste come into Georges' eyes when he glanced from Noel's flushed, humiliated face to Mary's, laughing and apparently heartless.

Then his eyes went to Olina, who with perfect poise, was watching Mary with just the right expression of puzzled yet faintly admiring amusement.

"I can think of no more charming task," Olina told Mary with a smile "and I'm dying to compare notes with somebody about that performance tonight. You and Noel hurried off so quickly I didn't have a chance to talk to you, and Papa Veritzen was so absorbed in thought as he rushed me home that I didn't dare disturb him. But I thought John Hayes gave a most marvelous performance. Didn't you, Noel?"

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

MAKE HIM WIN IT

Foreseeing your plan to make him win a late trick, so he must then lead back into a tenace, a skillful defender may thwart you with an "exit play." He throws away the card or cards which otherwise would take that baneful trick. Thus his partner takes it with a lower card and leads through your tenace. But you can sometimes prevent that defense by making him win a trick in still another suit—one in which his partner has no possible winner.

Notice what happened to that contract at three tables of a duplicate. Each declarer ruffed the third spade, then worked on a lead-thrower to put West in. At one table came two high hearts, the club A, ruff of the spade 10, the club K, then the club 9 to West's Q. West was compelled then to lead into the diamond A-Q, giving South his contract.

At the second table South played exactly the same, but West put his J on the club A trick and his Q on the K. The third club then went to East with the 10, and the returned diamond was through the A-Q, beating the contract.

That defense was prevented at the third table. There the declarer, after ruffing the third spade, ran four hearts. When he led the fifth, to the eighth trick, West had to toss a club in order to keep the spade A and highest two diamonds. A club was thrown from dummy, which South, after using the club K, then reached with the club A. Now came the killer. The spade 10 was led, South's club 9 going on it. West had to win this and then lead into the diamond tenace.

SAYS GABLE'S GOOD SOLDIER

IRONTON — (AP) — Staff Sgt. Leo Goldcamp, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry I. Goldcamp, needs no theater ticket today to watch movie hero Clark Gable in action. Home on furlough from his post at Pueblo, Colo. Goldcamp says Gable is gunnery officer in his crew. He describes the Hollywood star as "a splendid soldier, tough and ready, and highly popular with fellow soldiers." Goldcamp is instrument man on a bomber.

Sport Podge by REX HESS

Latest communique from the Fort Ben Harrison front discloses that a search is on for a pair of gunboats to furnish transportation for Mansfield's All-Ohio high school gridiron guard, John "Young Duke" Weber.

Seems Duke can't do any marching until they find a pair of shoes big enough for his dogs, which probably doesn't irritate John the Young Duke too much.

Now we know why Duke was so firmly planted in that Tyger line of '41. He was rooted there.

Of course this communique may have been somewhat garbled in transmission. It came to me by way of Duke's boo'in companion, Joe Romano.

The train that took Duke away to the army last week, also carried Mansfield's outstanding softball moundsman of the past half dozen years or so—Harold "Aid" Geiger.

Which also means that Westinghouse and the Moose lost one of their better bowlers. Another Moose kegler on that train was Joe Horvath, ex-Tyger gridder.

A word of advice to Brother Aid. You don't pitch softball with hand grenades.

Westinghouse A. B, and C bowling leagues have wound up their schedule but not their season. They start in on a tournament, rolling singles this week, doubles next week, and a headpin event the following week.

Westie D league, completing its schedule this week, will jump into the tourney next week. All will roll their tourney events on their regular league nights.

Yes, there's a bit of prize money already on the line.

Duke Weber's brother Fritz, home on a brief furlough, moved this winter from the sun-baked sands of Texas to the deep snowdrifts of Wisconsin, where he is now a ski trooper.

Freddie may have had too much of Texas in his walk and talk and stuff, but he admits he'd give a little to be deep in the heart of again right now.

"And those Southern boys who went to Wisconsin with us," says Freddie, "brother, do they freeze!"

My skiing instructor tells me you can't use any of Texas in your walk on those boards. That bow-legged approach lets too much wind through.

Martins Ferry Quint Rated as Favorites

Boasts 66 to 30 Victory Over Lima Central During Season.

By HAROLD LISK

COLUMBUS—(INS)—An undefeated Martins Ferry quintet which has beaten six tourney foes by an average of 20 points, today was established as a hot favorite over Newark, Lima Central and Canton McKinley in the state Class A high school tourney finals at Columbus Saturday.

Yorkville, a school of 87 boys situated only three miles from Martins Ferry, and unbeaten Middle Point of Van Wert county were installed as co-favorites over Tipp City and Waynesburg in the Class B race.

Drawings and final arrangements for the state finals, cut from 32 to eight teams this year because of the war emergency, were made in Columbus this morning.

Martins Ferry's Purple Riders already hold a victory over one of the state finalists. Earlier in the season, the Floyd Baker-coached five defeated Lima Central's Dragons by an amazing 66 to 30 score.

The Ferrians and Canton McKinley's Bulldogs have met one common foe. The Riders, winners of 24 straight in their bid to regain the state championship they won in 1941, hold a tremendous 73 to 41 victory over East Liverpool, a team the Bulldogs were able to defeat by only 11 points.

Newark's only two defeats for the season came at the hands of Dover, a team which Akron Kenmore upset in the Zanesville regionals. Martins Ferry, in turn, trounced Kenmore by a 55 to 40 score.

In six district and regional victories, the Ohio river five scored an average of 62 points, to 50 for McKinley, 45.5 for Newark and 41 for Lima Central. However, the Ferrians also hold the poorest defensive mark in the tourney play, the Riders' opponents having scored an average of 42 points per game. Lima Central and Newark both held their opponents to a 30-point average while McKinley's foes got 37.5 points per contest.

Yorkville, coached by Ted Sims and back to the state tourney for the second straight year, has played seven district and regional tourney games and has scored its wins by an average of 23 points per game. The Yorkville five has an offensive average of 58 points per game against a defensive mark of 35.

Middle Point, which recorded its 25th and 26th straight wins by turning back previously unbeaten Webster township and Wharton in the Bowling Green regional, has averaged 45 points in six tourney wins against a defensive mark of 29.5

The best defensive mark of the B finalists, however, belongs to Tipp City which has held its opponents to an average of 21 points while scoring 34 for itself. Waynesburg of Stark county has averages of 38 and 32 points offensively and defensively.

Two previously undefeated Class A teams were knocked out of the running in regional play. Two unbeaten Class B teams bit the dust.

Greenfield McClain, which had won 17 in a row, was defeated by Martins Ferry. Defiance, with a record of 21 straight wins, was turned back by Port Clinton, which was subsequently eliminated by Luma Central.

Utica, after recording its 23rd straight win, was knocked from the Class B running by Yorkville, and Webster township of Wood county was unsuccessful in seeking its 23rd straight win from Middle Point.

Xenia Central, last year's Class A champ, was knocked out of the running by Newark's Wildcats in the Dayton regional, by an impressive 33 to 24 score. Newark, winners of 22 of 24 games, won the state title in 1936 and 1938.

Orlie Grable Gets 692 Pins

Eagles Collect Two Games Over 1,000 Mark.

Orlie Grable caught fire in the City "A" bowling league last night at Colony alleys with a string of 234-213-245 for the loop-leading total of 692.

But only his 245 did any good for the Orange St. Cafe who used it for a springboard in a 999 game and their only win in a 1-2 setback at the hands of the Eagles. The lodgemen collected 1008 and 1033 in their first two games and wound up with a 2993 total.

Henry Heiser led the Eagles with 606. Other 600 scores in the league were: Winnie Cleckner 609, C. Englehorn 605, F. Peterson 602. Peterson tiel Grable's high game of 245.

Gyp Millers took a 2-1 victory over the league-leading 36 Bar.

Here Are The Athletic Weber Boys

It's been some time since the athletic Weber boys got together for the above picture. Left to right they are: Fritz, who qualifies in the athletic category as a ski trooper, John, all-Ohio high school football guard in 1941, Duke, long one of Mansfield's better bowlers, and Nick, former Mansfield high school and University of Tennessee quarterback, and captain of the Tennessee baseball team. All three of Duke's boys are now in service.

Here's Trouble For Beau Jack

Skinny Westerner Has TNT In Fists.

LON ANGELES—(INS)—A skinny, 20-year-old colored lad with trinitrotoluol (TNT) in both fists and visions of the lightweight championship in his mind, has recently sprung up in the west, and is looked upon as the man who some day might give Beau Jack the business.

His record is a little better than excellent.

Although his life has spanned only two decades, John B. Thomas has been slamming ringmen around for six years. In his time as a professional fighter, he has but one loss in his record . . . a decision sustained at the hands of Willie Joyce, who is rated not far behind the Beau himself. In two years of professional activity, covering 31 fights, Thomas has scored 16 knockouts, and 14 clean decisions.

And—get this—he has never been floored.

The sole defeat was an unpopular decision handed down here recently. The judges gave the nod to Joyce, and the referee tabbed eight of the dozen rounds for Thomas.

Two weeks before suffering that initial loss, Thomas knocked out Lew Jenkins, former lightweight champ. The Los Angeles boy is sure he could give Joyce the works should they ever meet again.

Before he began slinging leather for money, Thomas ran up an enviable amateur record. In 39 matches as an amateur, he lost only three starts. One of them was a three-round decision to Bill Eddy for the National A. A. U. championship.

Thomas is married and has a two-year-old son, which makes his services still more attractive, since he is farther away from the draft than most fighters. He is clever, doesn't tire easily, trains hard.

Although he is ready to make his eastern debut soon, it is not certain when he will be brought from the west. Mike Jacobs who has been looking around for new faces, although he is doing all right with the old ones, would do well to take this lad under his wing.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK—(AP)—For the first time since they've been in the national hockey league, the New York Rangers finished a dead last this season . . . But the club made $1,100 more than last year—not including $10,000 or so receipts from their Red Cross game . . . Cleveland is going for indoor track in a big way. The K. of C. is importing all 300 pounds of Jack Lavelle as starter for Saturday's meet.

LIGHT EXERCISE

Story making the rounds of the Iowa Pre-flight school (we don't guarantee it's true, but it illustrates something) is that a cadet was galloping around the track one day when he stumbled and cracked his head against the rail . . . As he lay there, waiting for the first aid squad to pick him up, another cadet ran past him shouting, "Well, don't just lie there. Do some pushups or something."

MONDAY MATINEE

Tommy Byrne, the southpaw from Newark who has inherited Lefty Gomez's No. 11 uniform on the Yankees, resembles El Goofo in one way—He'd rather hit than pitch . . . The difference is that Tommy really can hit. He batted .593 in his last year at Wake Forest college.

SERVICE DEPT.

Pvt. Frank Moore, the pro golfer and brother of the Cardinals' Terry, is now a clerk in the personnel office at Moore Field, Tex. . . . At the same field, Maj. Melvin E. Wooten, Indiana U. basketball and baseball player in the mid-twenties, directs the ground school and gives the cadets a run for their money during physical training periods.

Bob Johnson Goes To Nats

Wishes For Trade, and Mack Obliges.

By HAROLD CLAASSEN

NEW YORK — (AP) — Wartime baseball, which already has brought the substitution of chilblains for sunburn and snowmen for bathing beauties in the training camp life of the athletes, also has produced the I-don't-want-to-play-for-you society among the players.

Bob Johnson, slugging outfielder for Connie Mack's Philadelphia A's in recent years, is the latest to be issued his card in the new organization.

Johnson, with Indian eloquence, announced he wanted to be traded and Mack finally took the hint and sent him to Washington last night in exchange for Shortstop Jimmy Pofahl and Infielder-Outfielder Bobby Estalella.

He is one of at least seven major leaguers since late last fall who have announced a preference for a different job or baseball uniform—and have been traded by owners seeking to conserve their meager supply of manpower.

Pofahl also is one of the group. Only last month he was sent to Minneapolis of the American Association for Pitcher Owen Scheetz. When he said he preferred his defense job to playing in the minors, the Senators retained him and paid cash for the hurler. Now he is with the Athletics.

Eddie Joost, second baseman, and Pitcher Paul Derringer of the Cincinnati Reds, expressed their hopes of transfers during the off-season and were sent to the Boston Braves and Chicago Cubs, respectively. In their cases, however, family tragedies were blamed for the desires, each having lost a child in Cincinnati last summer.

DIAMONDS FLOODED

FRENCH LICK, Ind. — (AP) — Bookies are taking bets on which of the two diamonds, one to be used by the Chicago Cubs and the other by the Chicago White Sox, becomes playable first. Right now both are under water.

Pitched Under Threat of Ax

Ehmke Set S. O. Record Facing Pink Ticket.

PHILADELPHIA —(INS)— Howard Ehmke, who set a record in fanning batters in the 1929 World series between the Philadelphia Athletics and the Chicago Cubs, recently told of how he took to the mound for the A's knowing his club had planned to let him go.

Earlier in the season, he was notified he was just about ready for his walking papers, but somehow he talked Connie Mack out of it. After winning four games in the pennant drive, he was selected by Connie to pitch the first series game against the Cubs.

But, mindful of the earlier reminder that he was verging on failure, he didn't boast. "It was such a secret, I didn't even tell my wife," he related.

When the seventh inning of that game rolled around, Ehmke had fanned 12 Cubs.

"Jimmy Foxx, who had promised to hit one for me if I pitched, came to bat and slammed out a homer," continued Ehmke. "By the end of the ninth, the A's had two more runs and were leading 3-0.

"Then things began to blow up in my face—the Cubs scored two and had tying and winning runs on base. Stan Tolson, a pinch hitter, came up to bat.

"The count was two strikes and three balls. Catcher Mickey Cochrane and I had a conference. I told Mike to sign a fast ball and be ready, as I was going to shake off his sign and pitch at the same time.

"While I was out there, I kept thinking, of course, about how much this game meant to me. It's no fun to be pitching on the spot for a club that was once ready to fire you.

"I pitched," Mike yelled. "Hit it!" and Tolson swung.

Ehmke then paused in his narrative and grinningly contemplated his fingertips.

"Tolson," he concluded, "missed by eight inches!"

Indians Hope Rookie Clicks

Turchin Explains Low 1942 Stick Average.

LAFAYETTE, Ind.—(AP)— Until Second Baseman Ray Mack heard from his draft board Eddie Turchin was just another rookie. Today, however, the 24-year-old infielder is an important member of the Cleveland Indians and an example of how a young fellow can progress with the unusual opportunities offered in war-time baseball.

No one knew anything about Turchin two weeks ago beyond the fact he had played both second base and shortstop for Wilkes-Barre, had fielded acceptably and had batted in the neighborhood of .260.

The managerial interest in Turchin increased after Ray Mack's draft board ordered him to submit to a preliminary physical examination. Lou Boudreau has praised his fielding skill warmly.

But can he hit major league pitching? No one knows, least of all Turchin himself, but he begs that he be not judged by his .260 battting average in the Class A Eastern league.

"In the first place," he says "that isn't as bad as it sounds. The Eastern league is a pitcher's league. There was only one .300 hitter in the whole circuit last year and he hit .313. He was sensational. We have big ball parks and a dead ball and I've seen a lot of .350 hitters from the Pacific coast league and the Southern association who came down here and had trouble hitting their weight.

"Understand, now, I'm not trying to say I'm a good hitter. I don't know whether I am or not. I won't know until I see this big league pitching. I mean in actual competition. I seem to be meeting the ball all right in batting practice, but that doesn't mean anything."

He is married and the father of a seven-month-old daughter.

Corny Soars To New Record

Still Dreams of 16 Foot Pole Vault.

CHICAGO —(INS)— Cornelius Warmerdam, who established a new world pole vault record of 15 feet 8½ inches in the Chicago relays, headed back to his duties at the Navy's Pre flight school at Chapel Hill, N. C., today, convinced that with a "little luck" he could have cleared the phenomenal height of 16 feet.

The feat of the 2-year-old Californian who gave up a job as a high school mathematics teacher to accept an ensign's commission, was recorded Saturday night before a breathless crowd of 15,000 fans.

Competing for the first time under the colors of the Preflight school known as the "Cloudbusters," Warmerdam, the only man in the world to vault higher than 15 feet, shattered his own indoor mark of 15 feet 7¼ inches set in Boston a year ago and also bettered his world outdoor record of 15 feet 7¾ inches established May 23, 1942, in Modesto, Cal.

Warmerdam, stole the show from Greg Rice of Notre Dame competing for the New York Athletic club who won the two mile feature but did not better his own indoor mark of 8:51.1 made in the same meet two years ago.

Gil Dodds, Boston Divinity student and Ashland (O.) college graduate, took secondary track honors by winning the Bankers' Mile in 4:08.5 to whip Earl Mitchell of Indiana and Frank Dixon, New York University freshman and National A. A. U. champion.

Michigan's two mile relay team ran to victory in that event and came within a tenth of a second of the meet record. Dwight Eddleman, University of Illinois freshman, won the high jump with a leap of 6 feet 6 inches.

BOOKS GAME

EVANSVILLE, Ind.—(AP)—Manager Steve O'Neill of the Detroit Tigers has scheduled the first intra-squad game for his athletes on Wednesday. It will be in preparation for the week-end series with the Chicago White Sox.

Red Wings Take Last Period Win

(By United Press)

The Detroit Red Wings exploded a three-goal last-period rally to whip the Toronto Maple Leafs, 4-2, last night in the opening game of their best-of-seven series a Stanley cup hockey playoffs at Detroit as Boston's Bruins got off on the right foot by shading the Montreal Canadiens, 5-4, in a "sudden death" struggle.

A crowd of 12,723 jammed Detroit's Olympia rink to watch the National league champions come from behind to tie the score at 1-all as the first period ended and then out-goal the third-place Maple Leafs in the closing session.

Don Gallinger brought a Boston crowd of 13,000 fans to its feet after 12½ minutes of overtime play when he sneaked in the winning goal on a pass from Bep Guidolin.

Toronto plays at Detroit in the second of their games and Montreal invades Boston again on Tuesday.

WRIGHT INELIGIBLE

COLUMBUS—(AP)—A deficiency in an accounting course will make Bob Wright, Ohio State's national collegiate and Big Ten hurdle champion, ineligible for track during the approaching outdoor season, Coach Frank R. Castleman announced. Wright, competing as an independent, swept the hurdle series in the Chicago relays Saturday.

CHAMP ENTERS

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Emmet Cashin of Stanford university, Pacific coast collegiate breast stroke champion, has entered the N. C. A. A. swim meet at Ohio State university Friday and Saturday. Buckeye Coach Mike Peppe announced.

REACH CAMP

WILMINGTON, Del. — (AP) — First arrivals at the Philadelphia Athletic training camp, which opens today, were Pitchers Russ Christopher, Jesse Flores and Roger Wolff and Catcher Earl Brucker.

Urges Continued Use Of Freshmen

NEW YORK —(AP)— Basketball Coach Burl Friddle of Toledo university said today that freshmen should be permitted to continue competition in post-war collegiate varsity athletics.

In these war days freshmen are proving their eagerness for varsity competition, their scrappiness and their ability while meeting scholastic requirements, Friddle said.

Although the frosh may lack the matured poise under fire, and the stamina of collegiate upper classmen, they do not suffer the complacency of many upper-classmen athletes, he added.

Bisons Have Edge In Hockey Series

(By United Press)

The Buffalo Bisons had a 2-1 edge today over the American Hockey league's regular-season champions, the Hershey Bears, after scoring a 4-2 triumph in the third game of their best-of-seven series "A" playoff at Buffalo last night.

More than 10,000 spectators watched the Bisons come from behind in the second period and win the game on Clint Smith's tally.

The win was the second in a row for the Bisons, who meet the Bears in the next game of their series at Buffalo Wednesday.

Power, Brains Make Champ

College Title Holder Won't Become Pro.

By BOB WILSON

SYRACUSE — (AP)— Explosive power in both fists and "plenty of brains" have carried Syracuse University's Salvatore "Toots" Mirabito to college boxing's highest pinnacle.

Toots, three-time winner of the Eastern intercollege heavyweight boxing title and holder of the National collegiate heavyweight championship, has won 30 straight college bouts, 13 by knockouts.

In fact, the chunky, 23-year-old physical education student has never been defeated in the ring, winning 50 scraps as a battler at Norwich, N. Y., high school and Manlius prep.

What makes Toots a great fighter?

"He can hit with either hand, he's smart and aggressive," said Tony Balash, his coach, and himself winner of the eastern intercollegiate middleweight title in 1933. "Some of his hardest punches travel only six inches."

"Toots is a good boxer, but he has to be smart to overcome his lack of height," Tony pointed out. "He's only five feet, 10 inches tall and 195 pounds. Some of the boys he meets have much more powerful builds."

"Besides all that, Toots has what it takes to win when the chips are down. Six times in his college career, he's gone in there with the fate of the entire match hanging on the final bout."

Mirabito was called up by the army two days after he won his third Eastern Intercollegiate tournament title. The champ thus was prevented from rounding out his athletic career with another year on the baseball team where he was catcher. He also played a backfield post on the Orange grid squad.

After the war, Toots wants to be a coach. A professional boxing career doesn't interest him.

Radiant and free and liking your freedom. Liking it almost too much for my taste." He laughed, that rich, abandoned laugh. "Why don't you say something?"

Carol laughed, low. "I can't—when I'm listening."

"You can't indeed! I don't talk a great deal. I've lived too much in places where I had no one to talk to. There's one good thing about that. You lose the small talk this so-called civilization makes you cultivate."

His head outlined against a bright night sky, his back in the white coat as straight as a plank. She could not remember a time when she had looked at a man as she was looking at Clive now. Often at Bill, of course, but at no one else in her life. Looking and finding an immense richness and deepness of feeling. How long, how long had it been since she had felt like this—this heightened awareness coupled with something intangible, indescribable and infinitely warm and tender and lovely? She thought, "And I have been boasting to myself that I have lived without love as if it were something to boast about."

She knew when he arose and moved toward her. Instinctively she arose. There was no awkwardness in his arms. It was as though he had held her before. Their kiss was long and wonderful.

"You love me," he said. "And your poor, splendid mind is in a turmoil because you don't understand how you can be in love with two men at the same time. Don't fight it, darling. Accept it. Be happy with me. Be natural with me and we'll have a fine time, the finest you've ever had. . . . You're lovely, Carol. I've seen you in my mind so often. I've seen 'us' in my mind so often. And for all your marriage and divorce and unhappiness you're still so young in the ways that make me love you . . . I love you . . . I suppose you want to hear me say it. I love you. You're alive and intelligent and lovely and you—you bring back all my lost virtues."

"I don't know anything about you, Clive, except the way you make me feel."

"That's the most important thing to know about me—that I can make you happy and alive. I'm going to make you so happy, darling, that you'll be angry that you were ever unhappy."

"You knew when you came down."

"Of course I knew. I knew in Havana." He kissed her again. Then he said, "I don't want to talk, darling, I want to love you . . . on your terms, your way. You win."

During the days that followed it was as though she had never been in love before. Is love always new? she wondered. They were always together, became conspicuous on the beach and people talked and wondered about them. He drove her to the small, pink-shaded house where her father and Uncle Jeff lived and talked with the men and made appropriate remarks about Uncle Jeff's tenderly tended flowers.

Carol regarded him with wonderment and with eyes that seemed to be seeing everything new. When had she ever laughed so much? Was it partly the magic of the place and the holiday spirit? There was a sense of unreality about Christmas mid-warmth and sun and flowers . . . but an exciting unreality as a dream that makes one dread the wakening.

They went everywhere. And they were inseparable as though only together did they form a whole personality. Once comparisons swept through her mind and she knew that no one had ever sensed her wishes or read her personality as Clive did. His seemed to be a mind functioning just for her. He seemed to know her as no one else had ever known her

But there was no time to ponder or analyze. There was time only to be happy, to greet the new day, to meet him for breakfast, knowing the full hours ahead. There was time only to be more abandoned than she had ever been before and lovelier than she had ever been before with less care given to her appearance. It was a time not for thinking but for feeling, not for glancing back but for the crowded moment. He made love articulate for her.

That he both stimulated her taciturn father and invited his admiration was evident. The two older men saw few new people. Her father was solicitous and Clive made him laugh aloud one of the few times Carol had ever heard him laugh aloud. New energy seemed to flow into Uncle Jeff's stiff joints when Clive was there. She had said to Clive after they had left the pink house one afternoon, "You were very nice to them. Thanks. I appreciate that." And he had said, smiling, "I'm very nice to you, darling."

They had been dancing one evening and she had worn her prettiest dress, a chiffon one of deep blue with a full tucked skirt. Coming back to the hotel he parked the car and they walked down the beach together.

Clive said, "You've made me very happy, Carol. You are not the only woman I've ever loved, but you are the most lovable." He chuckled, "You don't know this, but you have made the aroma of romance so heavy that nothing can penetrate it. I'm being serious. I hate being serious and serious things. I'm afraid of them. Don't ever make me see a play or a movie that makes people cry."

"Perhaps it's your sentimentality that you're afraid of."

He chuckled again. "It's that exactly. How like you to know. You have the wonderful ability of being able to hit the nail on the proverbial head. It's too bad you've made a career only of marriage and men." Then quite abruptly, "You're not going back when you planned—that soon?"

"No. I haven't thought about going back at all. Must I? I'll write to the people at the hospital and to Freda. I've been sending only 'having-a-wonderful-time' postcards home."

"A woman who can keep a love affair a secret?"

"There's only one person I want to know, Freda. But I'm afraid I couldn't do justice to you on paper."

He laughed as he stopped and put his arms around her.

"And Bill let you go. You don't mind if I speak of him now, do you? It doesn't hurt so much. Some, yes. A little, I know. The two worlds don't conflict. But I'm jealous of him; jealous of your past with him. You haven't told me you're jealous of your predecessors."

Tilting her face, he smiled at her. "A galaxy of lovely women you've sent packing. I shouldn't tell you this . . . but whatever it is between us has made you the only one. I'm getting involved. Getting involved when it's really so simple. This business of a man and woman in love isn't complicated at all. We make each other happy. Isn't that all that is important to know and be sure of?"

"Clive, I think what is best is knowing that the ability to fall in love doesn't exhaust itself. You say the same things you've read or heard or said before and yet they're new and . . . and no less wonderful."

He smoothed away the frown between her eyes. "Was that there because you wonder where we're going from here? You wouldn't be a woman if you didn't wonder. But let's not talk about it until we must. It will bring up practical things like dates and reasons and plans. It will spoil it."

"I won't have it spoiled."

"Good. It's been almost perfect. You're tired, darling. Love does interfere with one's sleep, doesn't it? Let's go back. You're shivering."

"Shivering, but happy. I seem to be above all the things that bothered me. They can't touch me here . . ."

"Only I can touch you? That's what I want."

"Kiss me Clive."

"I'll always take orders like that from you, darling."

Walking up the hotel steps, he said, "I suppose the guests here wonder why we don't get married and get it over."

HERE'S A SAMPLE OF HIS COLUMN:

"They had enough thriller-diller experiences to fill a book. Lieut. Ed Boughton of New York had a typical one. His plane was shot all to pieces, and the glass canopy that shuts him into the seat was damaged so he couldn't get it open. Consequently he couldn't jump, and simply had to land the plane or die.

"Miraculously, he got it back to the field and crash-landed it. The plane was nothing but junk—Lieut. Boughton wasn't hurt. When they finally got him out, they discovered that the jammed canopy had probably saved his life. For his parachute was shot half away, and if he'd jumped he would have fallen like a plummet."

BRITISH FARMS UNDER STRICT WAR MEASURES

Operators Take Orders From Government; Plowed Acres Increase 50 Per Cent.

GREELEY, Colo. —(INS)— Colorado farmers, given a mild taste of life on a war-time British farm, decided they didn't like it.

Their glimpse into English rural life was given them by Francis Flood, English farm magazine editor now connected with the British Supply council in Washington. He spoke at a meeting of the Farmers' Institute of Weld county.

The British farmer, Flood said, is taking in stride, as a part of his contribution to the war effort, the complete regimentation of himself and his family and all of his farming activities. He hopes that after the war is won, the government will relax control over the farms but, for now, the farmer realizes that Britain's necessity demands as strict control over the rural acreages as over the military barracks.

Flood said this system has resulted in an increase of 50 per cent in plowed acreage; 75 per cent in oats production; 71 per cent in potatoes, 62 percent in all grain crops; and 50 per cent in vegetables.

On the other hand, meat production has decreased due, Flood intimated, to a shortage of food for animals.

Not only is an anti-aircraft battery an integral part of many farms, Flood said, but hundreds of farmers have had to take the precaution of scattering their dairy cattle among many sheds, in order to prevent great loss if a bomb should hit one shed.

One farmer, living near an airport, has cultivated and raised crops in 65 bomb craters.

Flood said feed for farm animals is rationed by card, just as food for human beings. County war committees now have complete control over everything a farmer plants and everything he feeds his stock.

If the farmer rebels, the committee takes over the farm. The committees sometimes own all the tractors and implements and farm equipment in the county and do the work for the landowners at cost.

Then, on top of all that, the British farmer has a little matter of income taxes to worry about.

Standard rates begin at 50 per cent on all income over $440 per year for single man, $625 for married men. Income in excess of the 1938-1939 level is taxed 100 per cent.

Labor Leaders To Get A Sample Of Life In The Army

DETROIT — (AP) — Nearly 250 leaders of United Automobile Workers (CIO) war plant unions, accepting a war department invitation, leave today to join military units at Camp Atterbury, Indiana, for a three-day taste of the life of a soldier.

Until Wednesday, these war workers will be under military discipline, living and working with army men toughened by months of intensive training, seeing at first hand how the army makes use of the weapons produced in the plants from which the union men come.

Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson described their visit as "an unparalleled opportunity to learn what the army is like and what the army needs."

The union will pay for their transportation and for the cost of their food. They will be issued regular army equipment, with the exception of uniforms, needed for their duties with the units to which they will be assigned.

PRICE CHANGES INDECISIVE ON STOCK MARKET

Quiet Opening Finds Small Rises and Declines Evenly Balanced.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Indecisive price shifts predominated in today's early stock market proceedings.

Up a shade at a quiet opening were Great Northern, U. S. Rubber, American Telephone and N. Y. Central. Small declines were suffered by General Motors, Pennsylvania, U. S. Steel, Westinghouse, Goodyear and American Smelting.

Followers of the steels found a constructive indicator in the survey of the magazine "Steel" which said that the scrap position continued easy, with some smelters maintaining top production and at the same time adding to reserves.

Barnes was cited for "extraordinary achievement while participating in more than 50 operational flights in theaters of operations from December 5, 1941, to March 10, 1942" and for exhibiting "exceptional skill, courage and endurance in accomplishing a series of important and hazardous missions, including the transport of high ranking American and Allied officials and the delivery of sorely needed arms and ammunition to strategic combat zones."

The sharp gain was attributed principally to the record number of births last year, which the bureau said "resulted primarily from business prosperity induced by war activity and from anticipation of conscription."

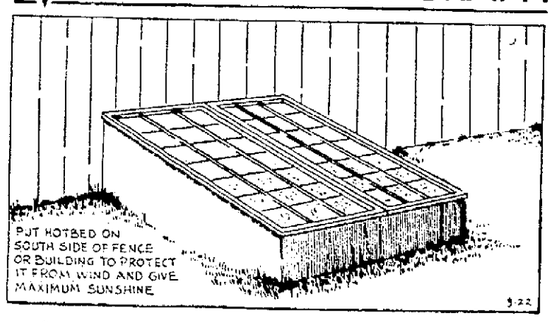
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Outwit the Weather With Victory Garden Hotbed.

By DEAN HALLIDAY

(Released by Central Press Assn.)

A HOTBED will add three months to your Victory gardening season. Hotbeds, therefore, are the ideal place to start seeds and grow plants for setting out into the Victory garden. One can get a crop of radishes, lettuce or early onions from a hotbed before it is even warm enough to start seeds outdoors.

Some hotbeds are so constructed as to be portable, others are of permanent construction. New hotbeds this year will, of course, be heated by stable manure (the old-fashioned way) instead of by steam, hot water or electricity.

The hotbed essentially is nothing more than a hole in the ground, or a pit, surrounded by a box-like frame built at a gently sloping angle to catch the sun's rays, and also support of the hotbed sash or glass.

As illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph the best location for a hotbed is on the south side of a building or a high board fence which will provide protection from cold north winds and also afford maximum sunshine.

Usually the north side or back of a hotbed is built 16 inches from soil level and the south side or front is 10 inches high. This gives a six-inch slope for the sash which allows for full sun as well as permitting rain to run off easily.

Latest German Air Giant Holds No Secrets For Allies

Latest German transport plane, the Messerschmitt 323, is shown in this picture, just released by the British Air Ministry. A monoplane with six radial engines and a multi-wheeled undercarriage for landing on rough ground, it can carry a load of 22,000 pounds or 130 fully-equipped troops. These are larger than any similar planes the Germans have had before.

CHURCHILL SETS TWO-YEAR GOAL

Tells World Plans For Final Victory and Peace; Gives Tip on African Drive.

peace which Churchill envisaged was based on an agreement between the British commonwealth of nations, the United States and Soviet Russia, supplemented probably by regional federations of smaller nations in Europe, because "in Europe lie most of the causes which have led to these two world wars."

The European council must "eventually embrace the whole of Europe and all the main branches of the European family must be partners in it," Churchill declared.

Although military affairs were given a secondary place in the speech, Churchill packed a surprise "punch line" at the end—a line not contained in his perpared text—when he revealed the British Eighth army under Sir Bernard L. Montgomery was "on the move against Field Marshal Rommel's Africa Corps at the Mareth line in southern Tunisia, where military observers have been awaiting a decisive clash for days.

Churchill postponed well into the future fruition of his social plans when he declared Britain was not diverting her attention from the war to a "peace which is still remote," and urged "evermore vigorous prosecution of our supreme task."

Of peace prospects, he said:

"Speaking under every reserve and not attempting to prophesy, I can imagine that some time next year—but it may well be the year after—we might beat Hitler, by which I mean beat him and his powers of evil into death, dust and ashes."

Then, he said, the Allies would turn immediately to "punish the greedy, cruel empire of Japan."

LAKE RONKONKOMA, L. I.—(INS)—Miss Sadie McHue, 39, was a sadder but much wiser woman today after almost providing this sedate resort town with its first potential case of drunken driving involving a horse and buggy in almost a generation.

Miss McHue's cries for help yesterday brought passersby running to her aid. They found her trying to untangle the harness of a horse lying on the ground.

Justice of the Peace Harold C. Sorenson considered invoking an antiquated highway law that prescribed a penalty for driving while intoxicated but decided to fine Miss McHue $10 after she pleaded guilty to public intoxication.

Pleasure Driving, 90 Miles Monthly, Allowed In East

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—The ban on pleasure driving in the east was lifted today but motorists could travel only 90 miles a month to shops, baseball games, picnics, dentists, doctors and other places.

Car owners cashing the first issue of A-5 coupons today found that there had been no change in the basic ration of three gallons. But they learned, too, that the customary allowance of 24 gallons of gasoline for use over a period of two months must last four months.

Extension of the time, which halved the basic ration, was ordered to retain the saving of approximately 30,000 barrels of gasoline a day which was achieved under the pleasure driving ban.

The old "A" cards had 90 miles of occupational driving and motorists who used those supplies for going to work or in connection with work are eligible for supplemental rations. To get them, however, applicants are required to form a car sharing club to carry three, or more, other persons to work regularly.

Murray Committee Asks 48 Hour Week For Steel Plants

WASHINGTON —(AP)— The steel labor advisory committee of the war production board, headed by Philip Murray, president of the CIO, recommended yesterday a 48-hour work week throughout the steel industry.

The committee told WPB a 48-hour week is needed to provide the manpower for increased productive facilities, and to compensate for the loss of workers to the armed services.

The average work week in the steel industry during December was 41½ hours, WPB said. Allowing for injuries and other unavoidable occurrences, a 48-hour industry-wide work week would mean actual operations averaging about 46½ hours, it was said.

Under the wage and hour laws, all overtime beyond 40 hours a week would carry a time and a half pay rate.

ALL-OUT ATTACK

Japs Poising For New, Bigger Thrust at Port Moresby.

GEN. MacARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Australia — (U.P.) — Japan is preparing for another thrust at vital Port Moresby, in an all-out effort to occupy all New Guinea, high military quarters said today.

The next Japanese attempt was believed almost certain to be on a major scale because of recent defeats, particularly the loss of 22 ships in the battle of the Bismarck sea.

High-ranking Allied officers were confident the Japanese onslaught will be stopped, but they pointed out it is likely to stretch the Allies' limited resources to the danger point.

"Convincing evidence" of Japan's offensive plans has been accumulated during the past few weeks, military observers said.

the return of wounded men who had recovered.

At the same time, he said, war production at home, spurred by the new "total mobilization" of the German people, was rising as a result of the utilization of older men, youths and hundreds of thousands of women and girls.

"Thanks to the sacrifices and heroism of our soldiers on the eastern front we have succeeded in overcoming the crisis definitely into which our army had been plunged undeservedly," Hitler said.

He assured his listeners: "Our front has been stabilized and we have taken measures which will secure in the months ahead of us success until final victory is achieved."

A Transocean commentator took occasion to say the fuehrer spoke "not as leader of the German people, but as supreme commander of the German armored forces."

Hitler, however, was surrounded on the platform by such army bigwigs as Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, chief of staff, to whom the Berlin announcement referred as commander-in-chief of the army, a title Hitler took during the 1941-42 winter campaign in Russia, and by Field Marshal Erhard Milch, whom the announced called commander-in-chief of the air force.

Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, second-ranking Nazi, has been regarded as the chief of the air force.

ASHINGTON—Censorship necessarily prevents a frank report on the very deep dissatisfaction responsible army and navy officers in the Pacific er the allocation of planes and ships to them by e joint chiefs of state.

Below the level of publication, Washington is ise over this issue. I alluded to it in general rms earlier this week. Since then, two of Gen- eral MacArthur's most distinguished officers have talked with President Roosevelt, apparently appealing for his help. One is Lieut. Gen. George C. Kenney, who is General MacArthur's air officer and the brains behind the recent extermination by air of an entire Japanese convoy of 22 ships. The other is one of the veterans of Bataan, Maj. Gen. Richard K. Sutherland, who is General MacArthur's chief of staff. Naval officers also are king a case for more planes and ships in the th Pacific, but it is not possible for very good sons to mention their names.

Clapper

gainst this clamor for more planes and ships the Pacific is the steady rise in pressure from er areas. From London, air officers put out the lic word this week that they must have more es before there can be an invasion of Europe. increase in submarine activity undoubtedly will ire more use of air in anti-submarine warfare, ch has been discussed at a general military ference here. If we are short of escort ships, we obviously must use air as a substitute. The mans claim to have sunk 500,000 tons thus far March. Even if their figure is exaggerated, we expecting heavier attacks from now on. So ybody from MacArthur on around the world to nnault in China is yelling for planes.

Last month we produced 3500 combat planes. In January we produced 3000 combat planes. Where are the American airplanes?

Military men say production figures are apt to mislead laymen. The number of combat planes produced in a month is not necessarily the number that will reach the combat zones at once. Part of our combat planes are assigned to advanced training service in this country. Apparently considerable volume goes to that use. Pilots cannot complete combat training except by training in combat planes.

Second, almost every combat plane that comes from the factory must go to a modification center for further work. At modification centers planes are given special equipment, or adaptations are made for particular areas to which the planes have been assigned. For instance, planes assigned to North Africa must have engines equipped against sand. The same type of plane assigned for northern Europe must have de-icing and other special cold-weather equipment. Some of these changes take several weeks. It is work that cannot be done on the production line without delaying output.

A third factor is the large number of planes allocated to Russia. We sent 2600 lend-lease planes to Russia up to mid-January.

The issue here is not in any sense a change in the fundamental plan of knocking out Hitler first. The issue is whether out of a combat-plane production of 3500 a month a percentage can be allocated to the two Pacific areas so that the force there may gradually build up. The argument is that if we can keep our striking initiative in the air in the Pacific our planes can earn very high dividends in enemy losses.

General MacArthur has been in Australia a year. This is not merely a personal issue raised by General MacArthur. It is not localitis, that disease which makes every man think his spot is deciding the war. Responsible army and navy officers in both of the Pacific areas accept, of course, priority second to the Atlantic. They have for the present only limited objectives. But they feel deeply that even these have been neglected

WLB LOOKS TO ROOSEVELT FOR WAGE DECISION

Awaits Presidential Action After Coal Operators Resort to Appeal.

WASHINGTON—The War Labor Board, confronted with demands by John L. Lewis and other labor groups for a revision of the little steel wage formula to grant workers higher wages, today was expected to delay its decision until a ruling is made by President Roosevelt.

Mr. Roosevelt received an appeal from the nation's soft coal operators to intervene in the wage controversy between Lewis and the mine owners. Fearful of a strike April 1, the coal operators sent a telegram to the president asking him to participate in the issue.

Meanwhile, the War Labor Board met to consider an AFL petition that it revise its little steel formula holding wage increases to 15 per cent of the cost of living in January, 1941.

The AFL demanded that the formula be revised to allow pay boosts of more than 20 per cent to meet the actual rise in living costs. The CIO, through its president, Philip Murray, demanded that the wage policy be changed to meet the AFL ultimatum.

William Green, president of the AFL, and Murray twice have had conferences with Mr. Roosevelt postponed. Both of them had served notice in advance that they would insist that the president order the WLB to revise its policies to allow wages increases above 20 per cent in a move that would scrap the little steel formula. Mr. Roosevelt, however, put off his meetings with the labor leaders until the WLB had an opportunity to meet on the matter.

The WLB, it was said, has yet to receive word from OPA Administrator Prentiss Brown and Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes as to whether they would allow a wage increase for labor at the present time.

Byrnes and Brown, particularly Brown, have insisted that there should be no industry-wide increases in wages.

Both Green and Murray were demanding that labor be granted industry-wide increases, particularly in west coast aircraft factories, automobile plants, and tank fabricating units. They were said to have warned the president that he could not expect full production of tanks and planes if the little steel formula blocked wage increases in the many war plants.

OHIO VALLEY'S FLOOD THREAT BEGINS TO FADE

River Reaches Crest Above Portsmouth; Peak Due at Cincy Tonight.

(By Associated Press)

CINCINNATI—The Ohio river flood situation brightened with the cresting of the river above Portsmouth and peak stages expected from Portsmouth through Cincinnati late today and tomorrow.

Portsmouth's 58-59 foot crest, four or five below the critical stage, was anticipated this afternoon and Cincinnati's revised crest prediction of 61 feet was due Tuesday, U. S. Meteorologist J. Cecil Alter said.

Red Cross disaster workers were sent to points between Portsmouth and Evansville, Ind., to supervise evacuation and food distribution work. Red Cross field representatives were making special arrangements with ration boards for additional foodstuffs for sufferers.

Newport, Ky., cross-river neighbor of Cincinnati, appeared to be the hardest hit of any river towns, with 165 families being moved out of bottoms homes. The anticipated crest will force evacuation on a total of 450 families, Red Cross officials predicted.

Run-out of headwater from the Ohio's tributaries caused crest revisions all along the river. Contributing factors to the altered predictions included Saturday night's cold snap and innumerable "flash floods" throughout the valley Friday, rivermen said.

(By Associated Press)

Rain-gorged rivers slowly crept toward dangerous crests today in several southeastern states, forced hundreds to evacuate their homes in low-lying areas, and threatened heavy property damage.

The wide-spread flood threats in Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana and Mississippi came as a downward revision of expected crests eased fears along the Ohio river.

Hundreds of residents of lowlands north of Hattiesburg, Miss., were evacuated from their homes under Red Cross supervision last night as the Bouie river swept from its banks.

Extensive flood damage threatened in Alabama as the Coosa, Alabama, Warrior, Tombigbee, Cahaba and Conecuh rivers rose steadily above flood stage. The Montgomery, Ala., weather bureau warned residents to leave lowlands along the Alabama, Tallapoosa and other flooded streams in that area.

his connection, I should like to call attention true status of Joseph Padway, the general l of the AFL and of seven or eight of its nent unions, including the Browne-Bioff which is still a racket notwithstanding the tion of those two eminent vermin who inely have never spent a single hour in any although it has been 17 months since they entenced to eight and 10 years, respectively vay also represents as attorney in particular many other AFL unions and about a year ago a Cincinnati judge awarded him a fee of $5,000 payable by the workers for a few days' service in a case in which a group of union teamsters had made serious allegations against a dictator who had reigned as he pleased for about 20 years by appointment from the union's main office in Indianapolis.

Padway's compromise stipulated that the complaining workmen must withdraw and promise not to attempt to prove by trial or otherwise their charges against the dictator. He came into the case by way of the main office of the teamsters' union which is one of his most profitable clients, and he is an intimate friend of Daniel Tobin, the president.

Many times Padway has had success in intimidating congress and in one historic instance he got away with it on the department of justice. Appearing before committees to oppose various measures intended to disarm corruptioneers of their guns, blackjacks and sawed-off pool cues. Padway has affected a roaring and officious presence and thus it was that the AFL was enabled to dictate to Homer Cummings when he was attorney general those alterations of the Copeland anti-racketeering bill several years ago, which last year were construed by a justice, in the majority supreme court opinion, as congressional approval of highway robbery provided the brigands pretend to represent labor. Cummings wrote a memorandum back to congress embodying the ideas of Will Green, the president of the AFL and of Padway and congress made this the law of the American people.

Actually, Padway has no more right or warrant to speak for labor because he is a lawyer specializing in the lucrative field of union law than the janitor who sweeps out a union hall or any other employe hired to perform certain services for a union. And the fact should be weighed in any weighing of Padway as a man that he not only represented and continues to represent the Browne-Bioff union but the bartenders' union as well whose affairs have been tainted by the brazen operations of swinish racketeers in Chicago and Miami. By his own admission, he got $1,000 from George Scalise when Scalise and his underworld mob were running the building service union.

If any legislator, state or federal, cares to challenge Padway when next he has the presumption to appear in the role of spokesman for labor, it will be necessary only to ask him to show his union card and state his official position. It will be found that if he does carry a card it will be strictly honorary and his membership fictitious.

HOPES DIM FOR SHORT SESSION

Legislature Starts 12th Week With Most Important Bills Still Ahead.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—The short session—perennial hope of all Ohio legislators—appeared dim today as members of the general assembly resumed meetings for their 12th week with a large portion of their important business still ahead.

Only major enactment as yet of a bill which attracted statewide interest and controversy was the change from Eastern War time to Central War time.

Still ahead of the legislature are proposals to relax labor restrictions in the female and child labor laws and elimination of the sales tax of food sold in restaurants and prescription medicine.

The labor controversy apparently is bogged down in the senate. Republican senators deadlocked, 13 to 13, last week in a caucus on the question of whether the work-week should be 52 to 48 hours for women in war industries. It awaits possible action this week.

The $369,000,000 biennial appropriation bill, which was expected to emerge from the house finance committee last week, still remained in committee because of uncertainty on pending bills—such as the elimination of the food sales tax—which may reduce state revenues or increase expenditures.

Bills which would increase state aid to schools, despite Governor Bricker's recommendation against such an increase, have received favorable committee reports in the senate.

GIVES ADDRESS

Mansfielder On State Medical Auxiliary Program.

Mrs. J. L. Stevens, president-elect of the Women's Auxiliary of the Ohio Medical association, will speak to that group on "The Place of the Auxiliary in Wartime" when they meet in Columbus March 30 and 31.

A group of delegates from Mansfield will attend the meeting at the Deshler-Wallick hotel where they will study ways in which they can aid in promoting better wartime health. Dr. C. C. Sherburne, Columbus, will address the women on current medical affairs at a luncheon during the convention.

A former Mansfielder who is now advertising manager of the Portsmouth Times recently was honored for his war bond sale campaign in Portsmouth. He's C. G. Linham, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Linham, 32 Florence avenue, and formerly with the advertising department of the old Mansfield News. Linham's idea for patriotic advertising to promote the sale of bonds brought citations from Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and the state war bond committee. The treasury's citation was issued for "patriotic co-operation with the nation's war bond program through the advertising columns of the Portsmouth Times."

Remy Horst, roomer at 92½ East Fourth street, probably owes his life to Police Captain Paul Whipp and Patrolman John Grohol. At 4:30 a. m. yesterday a passerby, attracted by the odor of fuel gas, notified police headquarters. Whipp and Grohol aroused the landlady and gained entry to Horst's room with a pass-key. The bed-chamber was nearly filled with gas escaping from a heating stove and Horst was in bed in a stupor. After being revived he told police he apparently had bumped a valve on the stove, opening a jet permitting the escape of gas.

Pupils at Hedges school weren't kidding when they decided seven weeks ago to open a campaign to sell enough war stamps and bonds to purchase a jeep. The sale was handled by fourth grade pupils under the supervision of Helen Myers, their instructor. The quota set was $937, the price of a jeep, and Friday the pupils went over the top in a big way, reaching $1270.50, more than $300 over the quota. Although the school couldn't sell bonds since it has no official agent, two Mansfield business firms, Shelly Smith garage and Louis A Woerth restaurant, purchased $500 bonds and credited the sale to the school campaign.

BEGIN 3-DAY HITCH IN ARMY

300 CIO Stewards Arrive at Camp to Get First Hand Picture of Army Life.

(By United Press)

CAMP ATTERBURY, Ind.—Three-hundred CIO shop stewards—the union men who take the war workers' grievances to the boss—began a three-day hitch in the army today to see for themselves that the life of a soldier is no picnic.

The men, all of whom work in Michigan war plants, are members of the United Automobile Workers (CIO). They left their assembly line tasks and trooped into camp last night for three days of army training as tough as that given to any yardbird.

The idea was conceived by Walter P. Reuther, UAW-CIO vice president, to show the men the difference between the life of a war worker and a buck private. Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson fell in with the suggestion and invited the unionists to camp.

They were up at reveille with the rest of the troops today, donned army uniforms and went to mess. They will be subject to army discipline and will be shown no favors. They will be trained "exactly as we treat our trainees, and not as guests," the camp public relations office said.

The men were assigned to regular army units—quartermaster, infantry, engineering and artillery—and some even will peel spuds on KP.

They will take notes on top sergeants as compared to plant foremen, and return to their jobs to tell their co-workers what it's like in the army.

Boys Held After 2-Day Hunt, Quizzed In Shooting, Fires

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND — Two 'teen-age brothers, hunted for two days and three nights, were captured yesterday by Cleveland police and questioned about the shooting of their mother and a recent series of suburban fires and burglaries.

The boys were identified by Detective Inspector Frank W. Story as Henry Hensger, jr., 17, of suburban Parma, and his brother, Robert, 16. Police Captain Herbert Tiliske of Parma said charges would be filed against the pair after questioning has concluded.

Henry was taken into custody as he appeared at the downtown Cleveland office of a dentist who had informed Cleveland and Parma police that the boy had an appointment, Tiliske reported.

An hour and a half later Robert was captured in a westside hotel to which the older brother led authorities. Detectives Anthony Blazer and Anthony Kocevar said the younger boy waved a loaded .32 caliber revolver in their faces when they approached him.

Story declared Robert admitted shooting his mother, Mrs. Frances Hensger, 41, at their home, but insisted it was an accident. The inspector quoted the boy as saying:

"I shot her by accident. I was taking the gun out of a closet drawer and was going to clean it when it went off."

Story said both boys denied any connection with recent fires in Parma and Lakewood.

Captain Tiliske declared "we have plenty of evidence against them," adding that a wrestling trophy, missing from the Ridge Road school in Parma since a fire there Feb. 28 had been found in the boys' room, along with cameras, radios, jewelry, two guns, and other articles which he identified as loot from burglaries.

Lakewood Detectives Philip Watt and Millard Reglin said street car tickets found in the Hensger home were taken in the March 6 burglary-fire that caused $15,000 damage to Lakewood's Taft elementary school. They added that a 12-year-old boy's confession linked the Hensger brothers with fires in three Lakewood homes.

Mrs. Hensger, shot in the back on Wednesday night shortly before her sons left home, has been in a hospital, Tiliske reported. Hospital attendants said she would recover.

action was decided upon because stocks on hand were not large enough "to support heavy public buying during the one week remaining before rationing."

Local dairy managers coincided in this view describing recent buying so out of proportion that some of them had resorted to voluntary ration programs in filling orders of customer-stores

A great number of local stores, owing to the scarcity, had adopted similar plans of voluntary rationing of customers.

Meat and cheese supplies, not yet rationed, are also growing increasingly short because of "scare" buying, grocers complained.

All signs point to a stiff system of point values in the meat-fats category, OPA spokesmen indicated individual consumers will have only 16 points a week to spend, but the final determination of how much of that allowance will be spent for meat, butter and other fats will rest with the consumer.

Consumers heard more cheerful reports, however, with the rumor that there will be a revised list of points for processed foods for the month of April with point values expected to be considerably lower owing to the slow movement of those items during March.

Certain salad dressings and mayonnaise, not included in the ration program, are not included in the freeze.

NEW YORK—(INS)—New York's restaurant diners today saw the "joker" in Mayor F. H. LaGuardia's announcement of the elimination of "meatless Tuesdays" for a trial period when meat rationing goes into effect next Monday.

With the city's meat supply practically exhausted they reasoned that lifting of the ban would mean little since no meat was available anyway.

William Barnes, 759 McPherson street, told Lieutenant Carl J. Kalstein and Patrolman William Taylor that a special delivery package containing records sent him by his employing concern in Columbus had been stolen from a milk bottle box on his porch. Mrs. G. Beard, 753 McPherson street, told police she had noticed two strange boys prowling the neighborhood before the theft was discovered.

AP BRINGS WAR FRONT NEWS TO MANSFIELD IN 10 MINUTES

Urgent war news from Australia now reaches Associated Press member newspapers in the United States in 10 minutes while it used to require from 48 to 72 hours to transmit dispatches, F. J. Starzel, New Work, AP traffic executive, told Ohio AP newspaper editors at their annual spring meeting in Columbus over the week-end. Starzel is former chief of the Ohio AP bureau.

The Ohio editors re-elected their officers and voted to discontinue their semi-annual fall meetings for the duration because of transportation difficulties. Eugene B. Moore of the Dayton Journal-Herald is president of the group. Vice pres dents are James P. Rosemond of the Akron Beacon-Journal and Fred J. Becker of the Massillon Independent, while George A. Smallsreed of the Columbus Dispatch is treasurer and Burdette T. Johns, head of the AP service in Ohio, is secretary.

Starzel said it requires about eight minutes for a war bulletin to reach San Francisco from Australia, another minute to transmit it to New York, and a minute to put it into bulletin form for AP newspapers, including the News-Journal.

He said war news from the North African front is still slow, requiring from 24 to 72 hours to reach this country because of poor communications in Africa.

Frank Walters, News-Journal photographer, took two second prizes in the news and feature photo contests conducted in connection with the AP editors' session. One picture showed Mansfield football players on the bench with Coach Paul Snyder, all with their eyes on the action on the field, and the other photo was of two women railroad workers at Crestline.

First prize in the metropolitan spot news picture contest went to Bill Todd of the Cleveland Plain Dealer for his photograph of a back door liquor sale which started an investigation by the state liquor commission.

Attending the session from the News-Journal were R. D Lindsay, managing editor, and Walters.

OHIOAN HELD

Youth, 17, Accused of Depicting Self as Army Captain.

NEW YORK—(AP)—E. E. Conroy, special agent in charge of the New York FBI office, said Robert Lewis Barnum, 17-year-old Toronto, O., resident, was being held in a federal detention home here today on charges of juvenile delinquency. Conroy said Barnum was accused of masquerading as a captain in the army air forces.

He said the youth, arraigned here over the week-end, was arrested March 18, wearing a uniform. He had been hitchhiking over the country since January, Conroy charged and averaged $15 to $20 a day telling friendly motorists he had been robbed.

The FBI chief said Barnum impressed home guard officers in Missouri so much they invited him to give a firearms exhibition.

ARMY LIMIT EFFORT FAILS

clining to make public statements, said they would abandon any direct fight to limit the armed forces.

"If we can't convince the authorities that they ought to slow down on building the army we can't do it by legislation," said Sen. Thomas. "We have tried to show that it is for the best interests of the army to slow down.

"It would do no good to pass a bill limiting the army because congress can't make the administration do anything by law it doesn't want to do. We could fix the size of the armed forces at 9,000,000 or 10,000,000 but it would do no good to raise the issue."

Some critics voiced hope that the house would pass the senate-approved Bankhead bill to defer regularly employed farmers and thus force a reconsideration of army limits. Some also saw a possibility of passage of the Kilday bill, deferring fathers from the draft, as causing a reconsideration.

Congressional sources, however, were informed that highest army-navy and administration officials have decided to stick by the plans for the huge fighting force.

Sen. Taft (R.) Ohio came to the support of the administration on the issue.

"We in congress have a perfect right and duty to determine the size of the armed forces, but personally I think there should be enough manpower to support 11,000,000 men," he said.

"If we go beyond that we may have to consider the question. Manpower is a question of application and distribution, but up to that point there does not seem to be a real shortage."

FDR GIVES UP COFFEE DRINKING

President Takes Milk and Says He 'Feels Much Better.'

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— President Roosevelt has quit drinking coffee in favor of milk, even for breakfast.

Mrs. Roosevelt revealed that fact at her press conference today, and it immediately raised the question whether the president had decided that his pet theory about using the same coffee grounds twice was a failure.

"No, he just decided he liked milk better," Mrs. Roosevelt said. "He is very proud of himself, and he says he is feeling much better."

necessity for the United States to co-operate and assume leadership now and during the post-war period.

Sen. Edwin C. Johnson, D., Colo., a non-interventionist before Pearl Harbor, charged that the Ball-Hill-Hatch-Burton resolution was "the brain-child of Wendell Willkie.

Rep. Clare Booth Luce, R., Conn., was among the freshmen signers of the round robin. Others were: Reps. S. W. Arnold, Mo.; James C. Auchincloss, N. They told the senate sponsors of the allied council resolution that it "follows the historic and proper tenets of the party." But Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Tom Connally, D., Tex., appears cool to the resolution although President Roosevelt has endorsed it "in principle." It is believed Connally would prefer to avoid senate debate on the resolution at this time.

The anaylsis of Soviet union war aims, which appears to reflect what has been officially presented to both Washington and London by Moscow, insists upon considerable expansion of Russion borders beyond their Sept. 1, 1939, limits. The areas claimed were parts of Czarist Russia or, briefly, of the new-born Soviet union in 1918-19-20, or voted to become Soviet republics after red army invasions in 1939-40.

Thus claimed are Lithuania, Esthonia and Latvia, Eastern Poland, Bessarabia and part of the Rumanian Province of Bukowina and those parts of Finland obtained by treaty after the Russo-Finnish war.

Churchill proposed yesterday that the United States, Great Britain and the Soviet Union confer on world organization as soon as Germany is defeated. He proposed disarmament of aggressors, establishment of some kind of "world organization," a high court to adjust disputes and a collective security armed force to prevent aggression.

Neither the White House nor state department would comment on Churchill's broadcast, but Secretary of State Cordell Hull is expected to have something favorable to say today. Congressional reaction generally was friendly to Churchill's ideas although short of being enthusiastic.

AGED FARMER FOUND SLAIN

Seek Clue To Killer Of Man, 71, Shot At Neighbor's Home.

JACKSON — (INS) — Sheriff Charles Cramer today sought a clue to the slayer of George Borland, 71-year-old farmer who was mysteriously shot to death at the home of a neighbor.

Borland's body, a gaping wound in the neck from a shotgun charge, was found near a livestock pen at the farm of Clarence Miller where the victim had gone to feed livestock.

The sheriff said there was a $5 bill in one of Borland's pockets and asserted that he was unable to learn of any enemies. However, the Miller home, which is located 10 miles west of Jackson, had been ransacked.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, MARCH 22, 1943.

Folks who pride themselves on "calling a spade a spade" will soon have opportunity to use one in their Victory garden.

Just to make sure that you do not miss reading Elsie Robinson's "Listen World" article, elsewhere on this page, it is given this special mention.

Churchill Outlines Post-War Aims

TWO prominent figures in the world drama of war were heard yesterday in a presentation of their views on the present situation and the future outlook.

Breaking a silence that had extended from November 8, Adolf Hitler gave a 14-minute talk on the occasion of observance of German memorial day and finally admitted that Germany had become a "war zone," although he rather feebly attempted to display as great confidence in ultimate victory for the Axis as he had shown during early stages of the war.

From London, a little later in the day, came a confident message from Prime Minister Churchill that Hitler will be defeated within another two years and "his powers of evil beaten into death, dust and ashes."

Recently recovered from an attack of pneumonia, and with his voice still showing the effects of that strain, Churchill placed strongest emphasis on the first task of winning the war, to which he urged concentration of all present effort.

He did not neglect, however, to take a long look ahead to the period of post-war peace and to outline his ideas of the general policies of British commonwealth and world accord that he deemed most likely to insure against future wars.

Again visioning a structure similar to the intent of the League of Nations, but this time with enforcement power, Churchill foresees United Nations leadership in setting up international agreements which will guard against aggression, safeguard the rights of small nations, and promote the welfare of all peoples.

Speaking of Great Britain's future, Churchill sketched a tentative four-year plan for establishing a lifetime social security structure for Britons. He said: "You must rank me and my colleagues as strong partisans of national compulsory insurance for all classes, from the cradle to the grave," adding that, "we cannot have a band of drones in our midst, whether they come from ancient aristocracy or modern plutocracy . . ."

Whatever time may now be given to advance planning for the future, it is quite apparent that present emphasis is properly placed on winning the war, and it is evident that even greater force than has thus far been exerted by the United Nations will be required for this accomplishment.

Voice of Political Experience

FROM the rich experiences of more than forty years in public service—extending from township clerk to United States senator—Vic Donahey has developed a political philosophy of life which he now takes pleasure in passing along to young men who seek his advice.

Vic, who is now nearing 70 (next July 7, to be exact), is now going along rather placidly as president of an insurance company with headquarters in Columbus, and is looking forward to spending the summer at his Indian lake home—with at least the possibility that he will start on a book that he "has threatened to write."

Here are just a few of the suggestions Vic offers to younger men aspiring to a career of public service:

"All politicians are divided into two classes—those who do the things for which others take credit, and those who get credit for what other men do.

"You must try to be neither too smart nor too dumb, and you must make your ears and eyes do four times as much work as your mouth—with the result that a lot of intellectuals will think you are dumb but lucky.

"A successful public servant will surround himself with men who know as much, if not more, than he does.

"In public service there is no such thing as confidential or private letters. Write no letters that you are afraid to have the world read.

"A progressive in politics is a person who has got started and cannot stop. A reactionary is a person who has stopped and can't start.

"Common sense and common honesty is the green light of politics—always safe.

"You must choose your enemies with great care and keep faith with your friends. To serve the people and keep their respect is the only worthwhile thing that can be attained in public life."

Then Vic says: "After you study these thoughts for one year, I will, on application, send you a second year's study course on political morality and administrative economics—the crying need of government."

It was in 1920 that Vic was defeated for governor. Then he was elected for three successive terms and in 1934 he was elected to the senate. Even a few excerpts from the course that he followed, and which he now recommends to others, give an idea of how he won recognition as Ohio's best "vote-getter."

He should find time to write a book, as he has "threatened." It would have value in preserving the record of a fine public career and might also provide inspiration for those who must prepare to do similar work in the future.

Taxpaying Becomes Personal

THERE is no longer any way of loading the tax bill onto "the other fellow." It is now in the lap of every family in the land. Taxes come ahead of all family bills. The American family will have to learn to economize as never before.

A single person with an income of $100 a month will pay the federal government approximately $175 in 1943, and this does not include other taxes. A single person earning $15 a week, with no dependents, will pay some $56 federal taxes, not counting other taxes.

People will have to go without a lot of things hereafter to accumulate tax money. As they scrimp to meet tax obligations, they will take increasing interest in seeing that city, county, state and federal governments also economize: that frills and furbelows in government are eliminated "for the duration," and for a long time thereafter.

Those who suggest that some of the bureaucrats be transferred to farms should keep in mind that "farm work" is work.

Time To Get Tough

THE LITTLE OLD LADY was very frail. She tapped her way down the movie aisle until she glimpsed an empty seat, three spaces in. She stopped there smiling, pointing quietly toward her cane as an explanation of her inability to pass.

The boy was a great lout of a fellow, whose legs spread well into the aisle. After a scowling stare he settled deeper into his seat, sprawled his feet still further, hitting the old lady's cane as he did so. She tottered, swayed; would have fallen headlong if the big westerner across the way had not caught her, settled her gently in his own seat. "All right, mother?" he whispered.

Then without further words, he whirled, yanked the sulky cub upright and boosted him out to the pavement. Whereupon he proceeded to shake him until the pasty, pimpled face went green with terror and the weedy legs spun in escape.

After which he straightened his huge Stetson, took a hitch in his silver studded belt and explained the circumstances to the startled manager.

"Man, I'm glad you did it," grinned that gentleman. "It's a pity there aren't more like you. These hoodlums are getting thicker'n fleas and tougher than wharf rats. But the public lets them get by with it and what can we do?"

I listened, inwardly cheering. How often I had longed to deal out a little extemporaneous justice myself! Shrill groups of high school girls giggling in the midst of heart moving drama . . . rowdy gangs of boys, pushing, guffawing . . . indifferent young parents gum-chewing lustily while Honey Lamb, aged 2 explores all neighboring shins and garters . . . enthusiastic lovers giving strip-tease demonstrations . . . all without the slightest regard for the disgusted and indignant audience.

WHY don't we say something, do something, even ask our favorite editor to call the turn with a wrathy editorial? Because our "mamas done told us," way back in the 90s, how we must always be Polite, no matter what. And the habit has stuck until we dasn't be anything else.

Later on, Tolerance became the password. No matter how we were put upon, cheated, chiseled or insulted by passing strangers or our own kin, we must ever be ready with that gentle answer which is guaranteed to turn away wrath. For who are we to pick the beam out of the Other Fellow's eye when, chances are, we have gobs of motes in our own?

Such was Mom's credo. Dad's was slightly grimmer, particularly when Mom's back was turned. A bum was a bum to Dad and he treated him accordingly. But generally speaking Gentility triumphed. Decent folk grew meeker and meeker. Toughies flourished like the green bay tree.

No self respecting saloon in the 90s would have permitted the rowdy antics which we now accept as a matter of course in any public place. Nor are such antics confined to the Great Unwashed. Hoodlums in mink parade as openly in Grand Opera lobbies as in Joke Joints. And I've a hunch—

I've a hunch that we, the "well bred, respectable citizens," are as much responsible for this state of affairs as the denizens of Skid Row. It's as much up to us to "keep the peace" as it is up to them. If we can't maintain the decencies we don't deserve them. Patience and forbearance are Christian virtues but there came a day when even Jesus swung the lash against the filthy parasites who openly defiled the Temple.

"WHAT'S THE ANSWER? I THINK DAD HAD IT. HE GOT TOUGH AND IT IS HIGH TIME WE BEGAN TO FOLLOW HIS FOOTSTEPS. POLITENESS AND TOLERANCE WERE ALL VERY WELL BUT THE "VARMINTS" WHO DEFIED THE CODE WERE DEALT WITH IN WORDS OF ONE SYLLABLE AND THE TOES OF TOUGH RIDING BOOTS.

America was founded by gentlemen and gentlewomen who knew when and how to get tough . . . and put people who didn't in their place. Are we to send eleven million of our finest men out to fight and die for a democracy while we, ourselves, refuse to clean the garbage off our own front steps?

WHAT the OPA seems to forget all about in its 1½ gallons of gas a week ruling for eastern states is that there are a lot of folks in this country who don't live in big cities.

Those who live where there are subways, surface cars, cabs and buses, together with stores in every block, have no problem. But to tens of thousands of "A" card holders who live in country towns it's a mystery how they can even do necessary marketing on so little gas.

Maybe Mr. Brown intends that the ration board chairmen in the small towns make allowances in such cases, but the trouble is that too many of these boys forget that they are there to help the public. They seem to think they are clothed with czarlike authority to make it tough for all hands.

If Mr. Brown would, as head man, declare his policies on dealing with the rural dwellers in such clear language that the local boards could not misunderstand him, it would be a great break for everybody.

Health And Diet

Headache Warns Of Other Ailments.

—By DR. CLENDENING

HEADACHE is the symptom of so many different bodily states that it cannot rank as a separate disease. It is a kind of warning bell which sounds in fatigue states, toxic states, fevers, digestive upsets, food poisoning and many other acute conditions.

Chronic headache occurs also in a variety of conditions and is more likely to be considered a separate entity. I think one of the most important things for doctors and patients to know about chronic headache is that it is seldom serious in the sense that there is any threat to life or permanent threat to health.

Nervous Element Involved.

Another feature of headaches is that there is a distinct nervous element involved in many of them. At least, the people who have them are hypersensitive to worry. For instance, a prominent oculist tells me that he thinks headaches due to eyestrain are very rare and he thinks it is easier to treat patients on that basis.

A great many people go to work in an office, get to worrying about the strain on their eyes and when they get glasses, it comforts them to think that the glasses are going to take care of the strain; they are freed from worry and the headache disappears.

The purely nervous type of headache occurs in the individual who has had a headache all day, every day, for 20 years. The giveaway here is: if the head has felt that way every day, how do they know how a normal head feels? This is a kind of defense headache. Many a guy has been able to get out of work for half a lifetime and many a woman has kept her family jumping to wait on her with one of these pressure headaches.

Jesse Jones Lends ALCOA Millions Without Interest for Canada Plant

WASHINGTON—Another of Jesse Jones' interesting banking deals has just leaked out.

This time the genial Jesse has extended his generous bank-roll—on behalf of the U. S. taxpayer—to the Aluminum Corporation of Canada to build a giant power plant in the wilds of Quebec rivaling Boulder Dam. There it will be beyond U. S. control, will escape U. S. taxes, and will increase the control which Alcoa holds in both Canada and the United States.

The Alcoa power project to which Jesse Jones has been so generous is the Shipshaw development on the upper Saguenay river. To build it, the Aluminum Corporation has received from Jesse a loan of $68,500,000 of U. S. government cash. Furthermore, Jesse is charging no interest.

But most interesting of all, he provides that if the plant's contract is cancelled before Dec. 31, 1945, the balance of the $68,500,000 not repaid by the delivery of aluminum will remain in Alcoa's hands and need not be repaid to the United States.

Since everyone hopes the war will be over long before the end of 1945, in which case the U. S. plans to cancel all war orders immediately, the Aluminum Corporation stands ready to get a nice little windfall.

More Money From Jesse.

IN ADDITION to this $68,500,000 advanced without interest, Jesse also has advanced the Aluminum Corporation $34,240,000 at 3 per cent. In other words, the original $68,500,000 will just about pay for the cost of the power plant, after which Alcoa can borrow up to $34,240,000 at 3 per cent to operate it. Thus Alcoa has no expense and absolutely no risk.

While Jesse was helping promote this giant plant in Canada, with its large use of strategic materials, various American public power projects, which could have supplied ample power, were abandoned for lack of strategic materials.

Among them were the Shasta project on the Sacramento river; Grand Coule units 7, 8 and 9; one new TVA dam; the Colorado-Big Thompson project; and the Davis Dam on the Colorado river.

Jesse Jones, however, never has been a public power enthusiast, apparently ignoring that his chief in the White House is.

Note: For some reason word of the big aluminum power project in Canada has been a closely guarded secret until recently. Actually Jesse signed the contract in the spring of 1942, but his outfit has been very mum about it.

Huey's Relics.

THERE is a very good reason why the remnants of the Huey Long gang in the U. S. senate are fighting tooth-and-nail to line up Republicans and Roosevelt-hating Democrats to block the appointment of ex-Governor Jimmy Allred of Texas as a circuit court judge.

The Huey Long crowd remembers what happened when another Texas ex-Governor, Dan Moody, was sent into Louisiana to prosecute one of the Kingfish's satellites on an income tax case. The Huey Long-er involved was Abe Shushan, who finally squirmed out of his income tax trouble but later was caught in the Levee Board deal and sentenced to 30 months in prison.

The Kingfish boys remember what Texas prosecutors are like, and now they don't want a Texas judge sitting on Louisiana cases.

Scarcity of Sailors.

IN WAR TIME, as in peace, there is only one word among seamen for what they do when they've had enough of the sea and want to stay ashore. They "beach it." Unhappy fact is that at a time when experienced seamen are almost as essential as experienced airmen, scores are "beaching it" every day in the ports of the United States.

Norwegians, Chinese, Yugoslavs—the seamen of practically all the United Nations are getting fed up with three and a half years of sailing and sinking, and yield to the temptation of safer and more profitable jobs in this country.

A great British steamer (name censorable) put in at New York recently, preparing to sail with troops. But her sailing was jeopardized by the sudden action of the Chinese cooks and stewards who "beached it" because they had had enough.

A Yugoslav steamer (name censorable) was due to sail from New York when eleven crew members staged a sit-down strike, demanding shore leave. War Shipping Administration appealed to Immigration Service, but that agency declared it had no jurisdiction over foreigners aboard a foreign ship.

Days passed, and finally immigration officials yanked the eleven strikers off the ship replacing them with eleven others. But the sailing was delayed one week.

Can't Deport Them.

DIFFICULTIES of this sort have been current for more than a year. A remedy was expected after Assistant Secretary Adolf Berle and Marshall Dimock of War Shipping Administration pushed a program of reform which at first had teeth in it. But three court decisions, in New York, Boston and Baltimore, took the teeth out.

The courts denied the government the right to deport seamen who had deserted. While this power remained a threat over the heads of seamen, desertions dropped. But when the power was denied, desertions shot up again.

Desertions are now so heavy that Ellis Island is overflowing with foreign sailors. Immigration officials can't make more arrests, because there is no space.

Fault lies not with the seamen entirely, but in the fact that life ashore looks better than life among the torpedoes—especially when that shore is the U. S. with jobs and high wages.

Sugar Wins Friendship of Tiny Burro; French Marksmanship Amazes Soldiers.

ON THE NORTH AFRICAN DESERT—When finally late one night we arrived near where the wrecked American planes were supposed to be, our Arab friend "Wah" directed us over a multitude of tracks, winding around through bare wraithlike hills, to a little group of sand-colored buildings standing lonesomely in the moonlight.

We stopped about 500 yards away, yelled, and waited. At last there was a shout from far off. We shouted back, "Les Americains," then could see two figures start toward us. Two of us went out to meet them. You proceed cautiously in the desert at night when you're within half an hour's drive of the enemy.

The place turned out to be a French garrison, as we had thought. And they acted just as they had at the other French post—anything they had was ours. The commandant was a tall, thin fellow with long hair, who looked like a poet. We didn't know for a long time that he was the commandant, because he wore a civilian topcoat.

He and the one American officer with us went off to another part of the garrison to see about our sleeping quarters, and the rest of us hung around a big mud-walled corral which turned out to be the stables of the Camel Corps.

THE ARAB cavalrymen, or whatever you call camelback soldiers, gathered around in the moonlight and smiled at us and tried to talk. An old camel hobbled past, and I said, "Look, there's a three-legged camel. It must have lost a front leg in an accident."

It wasn't until next day that we realized the Arabs had merely hobbled the camel by bending its leg and lashing one foot up to its foreleg.

The Arabs had a tiny black burro that was a pet. It wasn't any bigger than a dog, and just stood around among us looking sadly at the ground, waiting to be scratched.

The soldiers were astounded at such a tiny animal, and all of us took turns picking it up in our arms to see how light it was. The truck driver jumped into his cab and came out with some cube sugar, and from then on he was the burro's man.

After a while the French said everything was arranged, and we all walked to another building. They turned over one big empty room with a tile floor for the soldiers to sleep on, and then insisted that the one officer and myself have supper with them. It was late at night, but apparently they eat late on the desert.

The American officer was the kind all the mechanics call by his first name, and he would have preferred to eat and sleep with them, and so would I. But we talked it over with the enlisted men and decided it would be a breach of etiquette if we didn't accept the invitation.

There were eight French officers and we two Americans at dinner. The French were dressed in all sorts of half-military getup. Apparently they've had no new supply issues since the fall of France, and they wear whatever they can get their hands on. They apologized for not having any wine with the meal. Hadn't had any for months.

We ate at a long, bare, wooden table. The room was lighted by a dim bulb hooked to a battery they'd taken off one of the wrecked American planes. Candles were used in other rooms. One of the officers spoke a very few words of English, and that was our only avenue of contact with our hosts.

We had a delicious omelet for an appetizer, and then a stew of vegetables and what was either goat or camel meat. The French can make anything taste good.

Just as we were finishing, one of the Frenchmen said "Shhhh," and cocked his ear. We all ran outside, and sure enough we could hear German planes high in the sky, bound for a night bombing of some of our friends.

Some of the French officers slept in beds, some on the concrete floor. They made room for our two bedrolls on the floor, and the next thing we knew it was daylight.

Frenchmen don't eat a regular breakfast, so next morning they came out and watched while we cooked our breakfast over small cans of burning gasoline.

ONE of the soldiers let the French commandant shoot his rifle, and then all the Frenchmen took turns. Their skill amazed the soldiers. Even with a strange rifle they could hit a small rock 150 yards away at every shot.

The commandant had a car—sort of a delivery wagon—and said he'd lead us to the wrecked planes if we could give him some gasoline. No wine, no gasoline. These soldiers at these far outposts fight a lonely and bleak kind of war.

We gave him five gallons and off we went, with several Arabs hanging onto the truck. We had at last reached our pinpoint in the vast desert, and were ready to start to work.

A Farmer's Diary

By CALVIN A. BYERS

Small Farmer's View

"EIGHTY PERCENT of the farm labor and farm equipment available by allotment or otherwise is already located in the local farm communities," said Joseph Fichter, master of the Ohio state grange. That seems to be a reasonable and very obvious statement. Looking at the food situation from this point of view, it would appear that co-operation within each farm neighborhood would be a partial solution.

The small farmer predominates in a great many rural communities. From his labor and his planning may spring the greater food protection miracles. It is all the small farmers, all over the United States, that will come nearer to filling the demands of 1943.

A wise forward looking farmer said to me yesterday in the village, "I have 60 tillable acres. None of my neighbors for several miles around have more than a hundred and some have less than I. Last week I counted 10 two-plow tractors and a community thresher. I figure if each machine and plow was kept busy, day and night, at least one fourth of all our spring crop lands could be plowed, fitted and planted. When lowlands were too wet, work could be done on higher ground.

"Many farmers around here don't have a full line of tools. One farmer owns a corn planter and loans it to half a dozen others. Then when he needs a grain drill, or a cultipacker he'll maybe borrow it from another fellow. Potato planting and digging, threshing and harvesting wheat, soybeans, oats or clover seed have become almost community affairs out our way. By working together, we can raise larger crops and do it cheaper per acre—besides having a lot more fun.

Large farmers can't cooperate like we can. They have to hire help at a terrible price. Our horses supply what power the tractors don't and our youngsters and older men and women pitch in when they're needed. We can get along.

"Somebody in Washington bungled about farm tools and drafting farm boys, but it's our country, and now's the time to get busy and offset bad judgment with good levelheaded farm management! We'll have to use what we have, and not let the fighting men down. If they win the war over in Europe and the Pacific, we dare not lose it here at home. And we won't, if every little farmer will realize how important he is, and get into step!

"I guess the most important byproduct of the whole mess may be to teach farmers better sportsmanship, a finer sense of justice, and a more genuine interest in each other."

START GALION'S CHURCH CENSUS

Check of City Residents To Be Made By Ministerial Association.

GALION — Crews of church workers started Sunday on a house-to-house city-wide canvass for the purpose of taking a census regarding the church preference of the people of Galion.

Eleven churches of the city are taking part in this project which is sponsored by the Galion Ministerial association to determine the "churched" and "un-churched" citizens of Galion.

No obligation or pledge is expected on the part of those answering the questions of the church workers, so it is expected that the citizens will be courteous in their responses.

Questions to be asked include the following: Whether or not you attend church. If not, what would be your church preference? Whether or not you attend Sunday school. Whether or not you are a member of a local church. What denomination you prefer. To which local church you would choose to belong. Names and addresses of those questioned will be taken, and the number of persons living in the home will also be recorded.

Two pamphlets will be left at each home. These are: "My Daily Bible Reading," and "Where To Look In the Bible."

Churches taking part in the census are Church of Christ, First Lutheran, Trinity Lutheran, Peace Lutheran, First Methodist, Market Street Methodist, First Presbyterian, Church of the Nazarene, First Reformed, United Brethren and First Baptist.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, MARCH 22, 1943.

Folks who pride themselves on "calling a spade a spade" will soon have opportunity to use one in their Victory garden.

Just to make sure that you do not miss reading Elsie Robinson's "Listen World" article, elsewhere on this page, it is given this special mention.

Churchill Outlines Post-War Aims

TWO prominent figures in the world drama of war were heard yesterday in a presentation of their views on the present situation and the future outlook.

Breaking a silence that had extended from November 8, Adolf Hitler gave a 14-minute talk on the occasion of observance of German memorial day and finally admitted that Germany had become a "war zone," although he rather feebly attempted to display as great confidence in ultimate victory for the Axis as he had shown during early stages of the war.

From London, a little later in the day, came a confident message from Prime Minister Churchill that Hitler will be defeated within another two years and "his powers of evil beaten into death, dust and ashes."

Recently recovered from an attack of pneumonia, and with his voice still showing the effects of that strain, Churchill placed strongest emphasis on the first task of winning the war, to which he urged concentration of all present effort.

He did not neglect, however, to take a long look ahead to the period of post-war peace and to outline his ideas of the general policies of British commonwealth and world accord that he deemed most likely to insure against future wars.

Again visioning a structure similar to the intent of the League of Nations, but this time with enforcement power, Churchill foresees United Nations leadership in setting up international agreements which will guard against aggression, safeguard the rights of small nations, and promote the welfare of all peoples.

Speaking of Great Britain's future, Churchill sketched a tentative four-year plan for establishing a lifetime social security structure for Britons. He said: "You must rank me and my colleagues as strong partisans of national compulsory insurance for all classes, from the cradle to the grave," adding that, "we cannot have a band of drones in our midst, whether they come from ancient aristocracy or modern plutocracy . . ."

Whatever time may now be given to advance planning for the future, it is quite apparent that present emphasis is properly placed on winning the war, and it is evident that even greater force than has thus far been exerted by the United Nations will be required for this accomplishment.

Voice of Political Experience

FROM the rich experiences of more than forty years in public service—extending from township clerk to United States senator—Vic Donahey has developed a political philosophy of life which he now takes pleasure in passing along to young men who seek his advice.

Vic, who is now nearing 70 (next July 7, to be exact), is now going along rather placidly as president of an insurance company with headquarters in Columbus, and is looking forward to spending the summer at his Indian lake home—with at least the possibility that he will start on a book that he "has threatened to write."

Here are just a few of the suggestions Vic offers to younger men aspiring to a career of public service:

"All politicians are divided into two classes—those who do the things for which others take credit, and those who get credit for what other men do.

"You must try to be neither too smart nor too dumb, and you must make your ears and eyes do four times as much work as your mouth—with the result that a lot of intellectuals will think you are dumb but lucky.

"A successful public servant will surround himself with men who know as much, if not more, than he does.

"In public service there is no such thing as confidential or private letters. Write no letters that you are afraid to have the world read.

"A progressive in politics is a person who has got started and cannot stop. A reactionary is a person who has stopped and can't start.

"Common sense and common honesty is the green light of politics—always safe.

"You must choose your enemies with great care and keep faith with your friends. To serve the people and keep their respect is the only worthwhile thing that can be attained in public life."

Then Vic says: "After you study these thoughts for one year, I will, on application, send you a second year's study course on political morality and administrative economics—the crying need of government."

It was in 1920 that Vic was defeated for governor. Then he was elected for three successive terms and in 1934 he was elected to the senate. Even a few excerpts from the course that he followed, and which he now recommends to others, give an idea of how he won recognition as Ohio's best "vote-getter."

He should find time to write a book, as he has "threatened." It would have value in preserving the record of a fine public career and might also provide inspiration for those who must prepare to do similar work in the future.

Taxpaying Becomes Personal

THERE is no longer any way of loading the tax bill on to "the other fellow." It is now in the lap of every family in the land. Taxes come ahead of all family bills. The American family will have to learn to economize as never before.

A single person with an income of $100 a month will pay the federal government approximately $175 in 1943, and this does not include other taxes. A single person earning $15 a week, with no dependents, will pay some $56 federal taxes, not counting other taxes.

People will have to go without a lot of things hereafter to accumulate tax money. As they scrimp to meet tax obligations, they will take increasing interest in seeing that city, county, state and federal governments also economize; that frills and furbelows in government are eliminated "for the duration," and for a long time thereafter.

Those who suggest that some of the bureaucrats be transferred to farms should keep in mind that "farm work" is work.

Time To Get Tough

THE LITTLE OLD LADY was very frail. She tapped her way down the movie aisle until she glimpsed an empty seat, three spaces in. She stopped there smiling, pointing quietly toward her cane as an explanation of her inability to pass.

The boy was a great lout of a fellow, whose legs spread well into the aisle. After a scowling stare he settled deeper into his seat, sprawled his feet still further, hitting the old lady's cane as he did so. She tottered, swayed, would have fallen headlong if the big westerner across the way had not caught her, settled her gently in his own seat. "All right, mother?" he whispered.

Then without further words, he whirled, yanked the sulky cub upright and boosted him out to the pavement. Whereupon he proceeded to shake him until the pasty, pimpled face went green with terror and the weedy legs spun in escape.

After which he straightened his huge Stetson, took a hitch in his silver studded belt and explained the circumstances to the startled manager.

"Man, I'm glad you did it," grinned that gentleman. "It's a pity there aren't more like you. These hoodlums are getting thicker'n fleas and tougher than wharf rats. But the public lets them get by with it and what can we do?"

I listened, inwardly cheering. How often I had longed to deal out a little extemporaneous justice myself! Shrill groups of high school girls giggling in the midst of heart moving drama . . . rowdy gangs of boys, pushing, guffawing . . . indifferent young parents gum-chewing lustily while Honey Lamb, aged 2 explores all neighboring shins and gutters . . . enthusiastic lovers giving strip-tease demonstrations . . . all without the slightest regard for the disgusted and indignant audience.

WHY don't we say something, do something, even ask our favorite editor to call the turn with a wrathy editorial? Because our "mamas done told us," way back in the 90s, how we must always be Polite, no matter what. And the habit has stuck until we dasn't be anything else.

Later on, Tolerance became the password. No matter how we were put upon, cheated, chiseled or insulted by passing strangers or our own kin, we must ever be ready with that gentle answer which is guaranteed to turn away wrath. For who are we to pick the beam out of the Other Fellow's eye when, chances are, we have gobs of motes in our own?

Such was Mom's credo. Dad's was slightly grimmer, particularly when Mom's back was turned. A bum was a bum to Dad and he treated him accordingly. But generally speaking Gentility triumphed. Decent folk grew meeker and meeker. Toughies flourished like the green bay tree.

No self respecting saloon in the 90s would have permitted the rowdy antics which we now accept as a matter of course in any public place. Nor are such antics confined to the Great Unwashed. Hoodlums in mink parade as openly in Grand Opera lobbies as in Juke Joints. And I've a hunch—

I've a hunch that we, the "well bred, respectable citizens," are as much responsible for this state of affairs as the denizens of Skid Row. It's as much up to us to "keep the peace" as it is up to them. If we can't maintain the decencies we don't deserve them. Patience and forbearance are Christian virtues but there came a day when even Jesus swung the lash against the filthy parasites who openly defiled the Temple.

"WHAT'S THE ANSWER? I THINK DAD HAD IT. HE GOT TOUGH AND IT IS HIGH TIME WE BEGAN TO FOLLOW HIS FOOTSTEPS. POLITENESS AND TOLERANCE WERE ALL VERY WELL BUT THE "VARMINTS" WHO DEFIED THE CODE WERE DEALT WITH IN WORDS OF ONE SYLLABLE AND THE TOES OF TOUGH RIDING BOOTS.

America was founded by gentlemen and gentlewomen who knew when and how to get tough . . . and put people who didn't in their place. Are we to send eleven million of our finest men out to fight and die for a democracy while we, ourselves, refuse to clean the garbage off our own front steps?

Daily Bible Thought

And we know we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren.—I John 3:14.

Dave Boone Says:

WHAT the OPA seems to forget all about in its 1½ gallons of gas a week ruling for eastern states is that there are a lot of folks in this country who don't live in big cities.

* * *

Those who live where there are subways, surface cars, cabs and buses, together with stores in every block, have no problem. But to tens of thousands of "A" card holders who live in country towns it's a mystery how they can even do necessary marketing on so little gas.

Maybe Mr. Brown intends that the ration board chairmen in the small towns make allowances in such cases, but the trouble is that too many of these boys forget that they are there to help the public. They seem to think they are clothed with czarlike authority to make it tough for all hands.

* * *

If Mr. Brown would, as head man, declare his policies on dealing with the rural dwellers in such clear language that the local boards could not misunderstand him, it would be a great break for everybody.

Health And Diet

Headache Warns Of Other Ailments.

—By DR. CLENDENING

HEADACHE is the symptom of so many different bodily states that it cannot rank as a separate disease. It is a kind of warning bell which sounds in fatigue states, toxic states, fevers, digestive upsets, food poisoning and many other acute conditions.

Chronic headache occurs also in a variety of conditions and is more likely to be considered a separate entity. I think one of the most important things for doctors and patients to know about chronic headache is that it is seldom serious in the sense that there is any threat to life or permanent threat to health.

Nervous Element Involved.

Another feature of headaches is that there is a distinct nervous element involved in many of them. At least, the people who have them are hypersensitive to worry. For instance, a prominent oculist tells me that he thinks headaches due to eyestrain are very rare and he thinks it is easier to treat patients on that basis.

A great many people go to work in an office, get to worrying about the strain on their eyes and when they get glasses, it comforts them to think that the glasses are going to take care of the strain; they are freed from worry and the headache disappears.

The purely nervous type of headache occurs in the individual who has had a headache all day, every day, for 20 years. The giveaway here is: if the head has felt that way every day, how do they know how a normal head feels? This is a kind of defense headache. Many a guy has been able to get out of work for half a lifetime and many a woman has kept her family jumping to wait on her with one of these pressure headaches.

Jesse Jones Lends ALCOA Millions Without Interest for Canada Plant

WASHINGTON—Another of Jesse Jones' interesting banking deals has just leaked out.

This time the genial Jesse has extended his generous bank-roll—on behalf of the U. S. taxpayer—to the Aluminum Corporation of Canada to build a giant power plant in the wilds of Quebec rivaling Boulder Dam. There it will be beyond U. S. control, will escape U. S. taxes, and will increase the control which Alcoa holds in both Canada and the United States.

The Alcoa power project to which Jesse Jones has been so generous is the Shipshaw development on the upper Saguenay river. To build it, the Aluminum Corporation has received from Jesse a loan of $68,500,000 of U. S. government cash. Furthermore, Jesse is charging no interest.

But most interesting of all, he provides that if the plant's contract is cancelled before Dec. 31, 1945, the balance of the $68,500,000 not repaid by the delivery of aluminum will remain in Alcoa's hands and need not be repaid to the United States.

Since everyone hopes the war will be over long before the end of 1945, in which case the U. S. plans to cancel all war orders immediately, the Aluminum Corporation stands ready to get a nice little windfall.

More Money From Jesse.

IN ADDITION to this $68,500,000 advanced without interest, Jesse also has advanced the Aluminum Corporation $34,240,000 at 3 per cent. In other words, the original $68,500,000 will just about pay for the cost of the power plant, after which Alcoa can borrow up to $34,240,000 at 3 per cent to operate it. Thus Alcoa has no expense and absolutely no risk.

While Jesse was helping promote this giant plant in Canada, with its large use of strategic materials, various American public power projects, which could have supplied ample power, were abandoned for lack of strategic materials.

Among them were the Shasta project on the Sacramento river; Grand Coule units 7, 8 and 9; one new TVA dam; the Colorado-Big Thompson project; and the Davis Dam on the Colorado river.

Jesse Jones, however, never has been a public power enthusiast, apparently ignoring that his chief in the White House is.

Note: For some reason word of the big aluminum power project in Canada has been a closely guarded secret until recently. Actually Jesse signed the contract in the spring of 1942, but his outfit has been very mum about it.

Huey's Relics.

THERE is a very good reason why the remnants of the Huey Long gang in the U. S. senate are fighting tooth-and-nail to line up Republicans and Roosevelt-hating Democrats to block the appointment of ex-Governor Jimmy Allred of Texas as a circuit court judge.

The Huey Long crowd remembers what happened when another Texas ex-Governor, Dan Moody, was sent into Louisiana to prosecute one of the Kingfish's satellites on an income tax case. The Huey Long-er involved was Abe Shushan, who finally squirmed out of his income tax trouble but later was caught in the Levee Board deal and sentenced to 30 months in prison.

The Kingfish boys remember what Texas prosecutors are like, and now they don't want a Texas judge sitting on Louisiana cases.

Scarcity of Sailors.

IN WAR TIME, as in peace, there is only one word among seamen for what they do when they've had enough of the sea and want to stay ashore. They "beach it." Unhappy fact is that at a time when experienced seamen are almost as essential as experienced airmen, scores are "beaching it" every day in the ports of the United States.

Norwegians, Chinese, Yugoslavs—the seamen of practically all the United Nations are getting fed up with three and a half years of sailing and sinking, and yield to the temptation of safer and more profitable jobs in this country.

A great British steamer (name censorable) put in at New York recently, preparing to sail with troops. But her sailing was jeopardized by the sudden action of the Chinese cooks and stewards who "beached it" because they had had enough.

A Yugoslav steamer (name censorable) was due to sail from New York when eleven crew members staged a sit-down strike, demanding shore leave. War Shipping Administration appealed to Immigration Service, but that agency declared it had no jurisdiction over foreigners aboard a foreign ship.

Days passed, and finally immigration officials yanked the eleven strikers off the ship replacing them with eleven others. But the sailing was delayed one week.

Can't Deport Them.

DIFFICULTIES of this sort have been current for more than a year. A remedy was expected after Assistant Secretary Adolf Berle and Marshall Dimock of War Shipping Administration pushed a program of reform which at first had teeth in it. But three court decisions, in New York, Boston and Baltimore, took the teeth out.

The courts denied the government the right to deport seamen who had deserted. While this power remained a threat over the heads of seamen, desertions dropped. But when the power was denied, desertions shot up again.

Desertions are now so heavy that Ellis Island is overflowing with foreign sailors. Immigration officials can't make more arrests, because there is no space.

Fault lies not with the seamen entirely, but in the fact that life ashore looks better than life among the torpedoes—especially when that shore is the U. S. with jobs and high wages.

Sugar Wins Friendship of Tiny Burro; French Marksmanship Amazes Soldiers.

ON THE NORTH AFRICAN DESERT—When finally late one night we arrived near where the wrecked American planes were supposed to be, our Arab friend "Wah" directed us over a multitude of tracks, winding around through bare wraithlike hills, to a little group of sand-colored buildings standing lonesomely in the moonlight.

We stopped about 500 yards away, yelled, and waited. At last there was a shout from far off. We shouted back. "Les Americains," then could see two figures start toward us. Two of us went out to meet them. You proceed cautiously in the desert at night when you're within half an hour's drive of the enemy.

The place turned out to be a French garrison, as we had thought. And they acted just as they had at the other French post—anything they had was ours. The commandant was a tall, thin fellow with long hair, who looked like a poet. We didn't know for a long time that he was the commandant, because he wore a civilian topcoat.

He and the one American officer with us went off to another part of the garrison to see about our sleeping quarters, and the rest of us hung around a big mud-walled corral which turned out to be the stables of the Camel Corps.

THE ARAB cavalrymen, or whatever you call camelback soldiers, gathered around in the moonlight and smiled at us and tried to talk. An old camel hobbled past, and I said, "Look, there's a three-legged camel. It must have lost a front leg in an accident."

It wasn't until next day that we realized the Arabs had merely hobbled the camel by bending its leg and lashing one foot up to its foreleg.

The Arabs had a tiny black burro that was a pet. It wasn't any bigger than a dog, and just stood around among us looking sadly at the ground, waiting to be scratched.

The soldiers were astounded at such a tiny animal, and all of us took turns picking it up in our arms to see how light it was. The truck driver jumped into his cab and came out with some cube sugar, and from then on he was the burro's man.

After a while the French said everything was arranged, and we all walked to another building. They turned over one big empty room with a tile floor for the soldiers to sleep on, and then insisted that the one officer and myself have supper with them. It was late at night, but apparently they eat late on the desert.

The American officer was the kind all the mechanics call by his first name, and he would have preferred to eat and sleep with them, and so would I. But we talked it over with the enlisted men and decided it would be a breach of etiquette if we didn't accept the invitation.

There were eight French officers and we two Americans at dinner. The French were dressed in all sorts of half-military getup. Apparently they've had no new supply issues since the fall of France, and they wear whatever they can get their hands on. They apologized for not having any wine with the meal. Hadn't had any for months.

We ate at a long, bare, wooden table. The room was lighted by a dim bulb hooked to a battery they'd taken off one of the wrecked American planes. Candles were used in other rooms. One of the officers spoke a very few words of English, and that was our only avenue of contact with our hosts.

We had a delicious omelet for an appetizer, and then a stew of vegetables and what was either goat or camel meat. The French can make anything taste good.

Just as we were finishing, one of the Frenchmen said "Shhhh," and cocked his ear. We all ran outside, and sure enough we could hear German planes high in the sky, bound for a night bombing of some of our friends.

Some of the French officers slept in beds, some on the concrete floor. They made room for our two bedrolls on the floor, and the next thing we knew it was daylight.

Frenchmen don't eat a regular breakfast, so next morning they came out and watched while we cooked our breakfast over small cans of burning gasoline.

ONE of the soldiers let the French commandant shoot his rifle, and then all the Frenchmen took turns. Their skill amazed the soldiers. Even with a strange rifle they could hit a small rock 150 yards away at every shot.

The commandant had a car—sort of a delivery wagon—and said he'd lead us to the wrecked planes if we could give him some gasoline. No wine, no gasoline. These soldiers at these far outposts fight a lonely and bleak kind of war.

We gave him five gallons and off we went, with several Arabs hanging onto the truck. We had at last reached our pinpoint in the vast desert, and were ready to start to work.

A Farmer's Diary

By CALVIN A. BYERS

Small Farmer's View

"EIGHTY PE RCENT of the farm labor and farm equipment available by allotment or otherwise is already located in the local farm communities," said Joseph Fichter, master of the Ohio state grange. That seems to be a reasonable and very obvious statement. Looking at the food situation from this point of view, it would appear that co-operation within each farm neighborhood would be a partial solution

The small farmer predominates in a great many rural communities. From his labor and his planning may spring the greater food protection miracles. It is all the small farmers, all over the United States, that will come nearer to filling the demands of 1943.

A wise forward looking farmer said to me yesterday in the village, "I have 60 tillable acres. None of my neighbors for several miles around have more than a hundred and some have less than I. Last week I counted 10 two-plow tractors and a community thresher. I figure if each machine and plow was kept busy, day and night, at least one fourth of all our spring crop lands could be plowed, fitted and planted. When lowlands were too wet, work could be done on higher ground.

"Many farmers around here don't have a full line of tools. One farmer owns a corn planter and loans it to half a dozen others. Then when he needs a grain drill, or a cultipacker he'll maybe borrow it from another fellow. Potato planting and digging, threshing and harvesting wheat, soybeans, oats or clover seed have become almost community affairs out our way. By working together, we can raise larger crops and do it cheaper per acre—besides having a lot more fun.

Large farmers can't cooperate like we can. They have to hire help at a terrible price. Our horses supply what power the tractors don't and our youngsters and older men and women pitch in when they're needed. We can get along.

"Somebody in Washington blundered about farm tools and drafting farm boys, but it's our country, and now's the time to get busy and offset bad judgment with good levelheaded farm management! We'll have to use what we have, and not let the fighting men down. If they win the war over in Europe and the Pacific, we dare not lose it here at home. And we won't, if every little farmer will realize how important he is, and get into step!

"I guess the most important byproduct of the whole mess may be to teach farmers better sportsmanship, a finer sense of justice, and a more genuine interest in each other."
